Food Cost, Gas Tax Push July Prices Up

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Food prices rose 2.3 per cent in July accounting for half of the consumer price index rise of 1.4 per cent in the month.

Another major factor in the index leap was the special 10-cents-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline for private use announced in the June 23 budget. Statistics Canada said this tax measure was responsible for about one-third of the July rise in the cost of living.

The increase in the food component of the index during the past 12 months, including July, was 14.8 per cent, well ahead of the over-all index rise of 11 per cent in the period.

July's index rise of 1.4 per cent was only fractionally less than the 1.5 per cent increase for June which ended a relatively low monthly increase that started in January.

The only major component of the index which declined during July was clothing: it was down only one-tenth of one per cent. Transportation was up 2.5 per cent and costs for recreation and education rose 1.5 per cent.

The consumer price index in July was at 186.5. Stated another way, this means that a basket of consumer goods that could be bought for $100 in 1961 cost $186.50 last month. The same basket cost $184 in June and $168 a year ago.

The purchasing power of a 1961 dollar had dropped to 54 cents by July.

The index is based on a 1967 survey of family spending patterns and weights of major component indexes are: Food, 25 per cent; housing, 31 per cent; clothing, 11 per cent; transportation, 15 per cent, and other items, 18 per cent.

Still to be reflected in the index is the effect of higher domestic crude oil prices that also were announced in the June 23 budget. This will add another five cents a gallon to prices for gasoline and other fuels later this month.

The Food Prices Review Board is predicting further increases in food prices later this year, although some of the food price rise in the July index was due to seasonal influences. The July index is based on a survey done in the first week of July, too early for many types of fresh produce to be on the market.

However, meat prices are expected to continue to rise and government restrictions on egg imports are pushing domestic prices higher.

Commenting on rising prices Thursday, Prime Minister Trudeau said "inflation remains a very stark reality in Canada."

He renewed the government's battle cry of several months ago, adding: "It's something we must solve. We'll all go down the drain if we price ourselves out of world markets."

Trudeau said he had no new anti-inflation initiates to announce but said: "Of course we are worried about inflation."

He conceded the government's consensus program was "not as successful as it might have been" but said he was encouraged by a slowdown in the rate of inflation in recent months.

Crime Law 'Package' In Fall

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Capital punishment legislation will be introduced in Parliament this fall as part of a "package" of criminal code amendments, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Thursday.

His statement appeared to support the suspicions of some Conservative MPs that the highly emotional issue of whether to abolish the death penalty entirely will be tied up with other measures such as prison reform, parole and gun control.

Both Solicitor General Warren Allmand and Justice Minister Otto Lang during the session which ended July 30 avoided saying directly whether the government would lump capital punishment in with stricter measures to ensure public safety in an effort to get more support from MPs for total abolition. But Trudeau on Thursday was not as careful.

"It is our plan in the fall to bring in a package on this whole area of gun control, criminal control, prison reforms, capital punishment," he stated.

Tsitika Log Ban Lifted

A logging moratorium imposed last year on the Tsitika-Schoen area of Vancouver Island has been partially lifted by the provincial government.

About 168,000 acres or half the area has been released for logging while the remaining acreage is still being reserved for further study by the government's environment and land use committee.

The logging ban was applied earlier this year while the government studied a proposal to establish an ecological reserve and a provincial park in the Tsitika River-Schoen Lake area northwest of Campbell River, near Sayward.

Residents of the Sayward area complained and petitioned the government when the ban was imposed saying establishment of a park would curtail logging and force over 200 loggers out of work.

Resources Minister Bob Williams said the lifting of the moratorium was allowed in areas where there was a general consensus that carefully planned timber extraction was appropriate.

In this way, he said, employment opportunities will be maintained and the committee can still fully consider making different land use decisions in the areas still reserved from logging.

All logging in the 168,000 acres will be subject to plans approved by the forest service and fish and wildlife branch.

"There was some concern expressed at the public meetings (held in the area earlier this year) regarding the future of the Sayward-Woss link of the northern Vancouver Island highway," said Williams.

"The committee wants to affirm that clearing of the necessary right of way is approved and that development of this highway is proceeding in accordance with approved plans."

The minister said involvement of numerous groups in the area during the committee's work was "most important and useful . . . and is a process that will doubtless be

SHRINKING SUGAR cubes are a sign of the times and that traditional tea-time question: "one lump or two?" may become "two lumps or three?" With lengthy strike at B.C. Sugar Refinery, sweetener is in short supply and cubes (left) from an American firm are distinctly smaller than those from major provincial suppliers. Sugar prices are also on the rise.

DIVER EATEN

HOBART, Australia (AP) — A large shark attacked an American immigrant to Australia with such violence he was yanked out of his abalone diving harness and completely devoured, the diver's assistant said. The only trace of Bobby Ray Slack, 37, was one green glove and a hand net, officials said. He moved from California about 10 years ago.

Saltspring Gas Users Cut Off

The lockout of Teamster union members who drive propane delivery trucks has depleted propane supplies in the Greater Victoria area and many residential users on Saltspring Island have been cut off completely.

The lockout of 300 Teamster drivers by Transport Labor Relations has shut down the three main propane suppliers on Vancouver Island — Cigas Products, Northwest Propane and Vancouver Island Gas.

The lockout is now in its third week and a Teamster spokesman said Thursday no further negotiation meetings have been scheduled.

The lockout has completely depleted the supplies of Gulf Island Propane, the main supplier on Saltspring Island.

Owner Bob Blundell said Thursday he has had to cut off all hs customers who use propane for stoves and hot water heaters.

He said many of his customers have hooked up hot plates or electric stoves to cook on.

Blundell, who normally gets his propane supplies from Vancouver Island Gas, said management personnel in that company have been delivering some propane for use in the Lady Minto hospital which runs partially on propane.

"They have to bring that over because it's an essential service, but even then we don't always have enough to give them as much as they want," he said.

The lockout has hit in the middle of the peak propane demand time for recreational vehicles and has left holidayers searching around for supplies.

R. L. Fennell, manager of Fennell's Trailer Supplies on the Pat Bay Highway said he has enough propane to last for another three or four weeks.

Fennell has a 1,000-gallon tank and so has not been hit as hard as some suppliers who have smaller tanks. His main business is supplying bottled propane for recreational vehicles.

Wells O'Weary Propane on West Coast Road supplies both recreational vehicles and residential users. A spokesman said today the company has enough propane to last about one more week.

Negotiations between the Transport Labor Relations and three Teamster locals began in March for a contract to replace the one which expired April 30.

Carl Anshelm, president of Transport Labor Relations, said the lockout action was taken because "there has not been one meaningful set of negotiations since they started."

Pilots Threaten One-Day Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Airline Pilots Association decided Thursday to halt all flight operations in Canada for 24 hours beginning at midnight Oct. 17, unless the federal government ends experiments in bilingual traffic control.

Ken Maley, president of the CALPA, announced the decision at a news conference here and said the association's board of directors has also decided that "if at any time, the government implements the recommendations of the Bilcom report on the use of French in air traffic services, the 2,700-member CALPA will cease all flight operations until such measures are withdrawn."

Air traffic controllers may support the threatened walkout in October if the transport department does not soon restrict licences of unilingual Francophone pilots, Jim Livingstone, president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said today.

"Of course a decision on what action would be taken would depend on what the board of directors decided," he said in an interview.

The bilingual communication report has recommended that the use of French be permitted beyond the five Quebec airports where it now is being used experimentally.

Maley said the decision has the unanimous support of the organization's member pilots.

He said the decision also has the support of the International Pilots Federation because the group has endorsed English as the only language for use on international flights.

The CALPA president said a flight stoppage would include all domestic and international flights in and out of Canada, and if the Bilcom report were implemented, the stoppage would continue until the issue was resolved.

The text of the resolution has been transmitted to the office of Transport minister Jean Marchand.

But Marchand's aides would not comment on the CALPA plans.

A spokesman for the minister said deputy transport minister Sylvain Cloutier is to discuss the situation with transport department air officials later today. A further statement may be made after the meeting, he said. Marchand is on holidays, out of the country.

Pulp Worker Pickets Close BCFP in City

Striking pulp workers set up a picket line around the B.C. Forest Products operation on Gorge Road Thursday, closing down the plant and throwing about 600 International Woodworkers of America members out of work.

The picket line, composed of striking members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada union from the Crofton local, appeared at the operation at 4 p.m.

IWA members reporting for the 4:30 p.m. shift honored the picket line and both the plywood and sawmill divisions have been closed down since.

The line is part of an escalation of picketing activities by the PPWC all over B.C.

Jack Groves, vice-president of the Victoria IWA local, said today IWA members at B.C. Forest Products are "disturbed that they (the PPWC) can't justify their actions."

"We have only three days to go until the mediator (Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon) brings down his report. All they're doing is losing us money," Groves said.

"The mediator is beyond any pressure or persuasion from groups of this nature."

Groves said the IWA had agreed at the time the mediator was appointed to put off any strike action until he brought in his report. "That report comes Tuesday and we want our people to have as much money in their pockets as possible," he said.

The IWA members are honoring, but not participating in, the picket line at B.C. Forest Products, he said.

The PPWC also set up a picket line at the B.C. Forest Products sawmill division at Youbou early today, Jack Mumm of the Duncan IWA said today.

Mumm said IWA production workers at the mill had already been laid off because the mill had earlier shut down for three weeks because of slumping lumber markets, but the picket line today did prevent between 25 and 30

LISBON (UPI) — Portugal's three ruling generals today created a new left-wing cabinet which pledged a policy of tough repression against its foes.

Within hours a wave of anti-Communist violence swept a half-dozen towns.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes swore in a cabinet that retained pro-Communist Gen. Vasco Goncalves, the main target of dissent, as premier.

Goncalves recently threatened to turn Lisbon's bullring into a concentration camp for political opponents and he reaffirmed today his tough stand against his opponents.

"In the fight against Neo-Fascist phenomena that have been multiplying lately in our

U.S. PLANS EGG CURB CHALLENGE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States will challange the legality of Canadian controls on imports of U.S. eggs before an international body and will open an immediate investigation of its own into the recently-imposed restrictions.

High-level U.S. sources told The Canadian Press today that Canada has been asked to join in an action planned before the council of the General Agreement on Tariff and Trade (GATT) in Geneva, but that no response has been forthcoming.

The sources said the U.S. will ask GATT next week to investigate the Canadian quotas and rule on their legality.

Modern Secretary . . . Demeaning?

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

The B.C. Human Rights Commission has taken aim at Modern Secretary magazine, calling it patronizing and demeaning.

Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo, "chairperson" of the five-member commission, has written Monk Office Supply at 754 Broughton asking the company to stop sending the magazine to provincial government offices.

"The Human Rights Code of British Columbia is based on the recognition of the dignity of all persons," said De Roo in the letter.

"Magazines such as this one do not reflect the capabilities and intelligence of women, and as such is contrary to the spirit of the Human Rights Code."

People in clerical positions could use a magazine that more closely reflects their interests and capabilities, said the letter.

"The magazine's been very, very popular," Monk Office Supply president Ron McKenzie said Thursday.

Published in Florida, Modern Secretary is distributed monthly by Monk to offices around the city.

A few years ago only 250 copies of the free magazine were being distributed, McKenzie said, but now close to 800 are sent out each month.

"We get 10 to 15 calls each month asking for additional copies," he said.

Nearly 250 of the issues go to government offices, almost all of them to people who didn't ask to receive them, he said. The magazines are simply sent to government offices where they are distributed by the mail room.

McKenzie said he can remember only two complaints about the magazine, one from a women at the University of Victoria and another, more

IWA tradesmen from going to work.

The PPWC is still maintaining a picket line at Saltair Lumber Co. in Nanaimo. That picket line has been up since Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the first on-the-job sign of conflict between British Columbia forest unions surfaced Thursday when International Woodworkers of America members walked through a pulp union picket line at the Crown Zellerbach sawmill at Armstrong.

The line had been set up by three representatives of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada currently on strike at the Weyerhaeuser mill in Kamloops.

Jay Gower, a PPWC local spokesman, said a company foreman approached the pickets at the beginning of the shift and informed them their line was illegal.

Gower said the foreman then tore up one of the picket signs and the mill's 200-member work crew passed through the picket line to their jobs.

The mill was being picketed because it normally supplies chips to the Weyerhaeuser mill, he added.

Gower described the incident as "pretty rough and upsetting; it's the first time union members have absolutely not honored our picket line."

He said the incident could have some bearing on PPWC reaction should the IWA ever picket Weyerhaeuser.

Reg Ginn, national PPWC president, reacted angrily to the news. "This sort of thing doesn't happen," he said. "The sanctity of the picket line has to be maintained no matter what."

Bill Shumacher, president of the Southern Interior IWA, said later that he condones the action of the Armstrong workers.

"The PPWC have acted in our opinion in a completely irresponsible manner," said Shumacher.

Lottery Money Keeps Rolling In

By SUSAN RUTTAN

The money keeps rolling in to the Langley St. office of the provincial lotteries branch.

Something over eight million $2.50 tickets have been sold in the four western provinces since the Western Canada Lottery went into operation a year ago, and British Columbians have been doing their share of the buying.

B.C. and Manitoba have chalked up the best sales, lotteries branch director John Stewart said in an interview, although Manitoba does it through big sales in eastern Canada and the United States.

Yet despite the good sales, the multi-million dollar Olympic Lottery is hurting Western Canada lottery sales, said Stewart.

"It is definitely having an effect on the other lotteries," he said of the Olympic. "People have only so many dollars to spend."

The Olympic Lottery lets the $10 ticket holder dream of the $1 million first prize; first prize in the Western is only $250,000.

Stewart and his staff of 13 are in charge of both Western and Olympic sales, and if the government decides to introduce more lotteries they will be added as well.

Some places in the United States have monthly, weekly and even daily lotteries, he said, as governments latch onto an easy way to raise money.

The lotteries branch this week opened a five-person Vancouver office, which will oversee sales on the mainland.

First Western lottery was last November, and they are now held four times a year.

Fourth Western draw will be televised Saturday from Regina, where $861,000 in prizes will be awarded.

All lottery tickets are sold by non-profit groups and individuals. Each seller earns a $5 commission on each book of 12 tockets sold, and each non-profit agency earns $5.50 per book.

The individual sellers often donate their commission to the Lions, Canadian Legion, Kinsmen or other group they belong to, so the group earns $10.50 per book, said Stewart.

He said there are ticket booths in two local shopping centres, and the lotteries branch hopes to have more booths in other parts of B.C.

From each $2.50 paid for a lottery ticket, 41.6 cents goes to the individual seller, 45.8 cents to the non-profit agency, $1 to the Western Canada Lottery Foundation and the rest 62.6 cents to the provinces as profit, he said.

The foundation, which coordinates the four-province effort, is based in Winnipeg. From its $1 share of each ticket price it pays for prizes, advertising and administrative costs.

The B.C. government's share of the profits was $683,000 from the first lottery, $484,000 from the second, said Stewart.

All B.C. government profits are put in the Lottery Fund, which is used to finance cultural and recreational projects.

N. Saanich Asks Gov't To Clear Hall Site Title

Seventeen acres of farmland in North Saanich will be the site of a proposed peninsula recreation centre if the B.C. Land Commission allows its removal from the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Peninsula recreation commission chairman and North Saanich Ald. Eric Sherwood said today he is applying to have the land removed from the reserve.

Land commission officials have already indicated to him they are unwilling to lift the site from farmland.

"But that doesn't mean no," said Sherwood.

The application comes after Central Saanich joined Sidney and North Saanich this week approving the site for a recreation centre that will likely go to referendum in December's civic election.

The property on East Saanich Rd. on the slopes of Mt. Newton was given to North Saanich this year by Dean Park Developments Ltd. which is subdividing the rest of a 600-acre site there for housing.

"It would be a perfect place for a recreation centre because it would be right in the middle of the area it will service," Sidney Ald. Peter Malcolm said.

"It's a logical place," said Sherwood.

He said 19 of 21 peninsula aldermen voted in favor of the site for a centre that would probably include gymnasium, curling, skating rink or swimming pool, meeting rooms and hobby areas.

One alderman opposed to the site said the peninsula should save all the farmland it can for the future.

"There's going to be a lot of hungry people in the world in a few years," Central Saanich Ald. George McFarlane said.

"It's no good going to church on Sunday and shelling out five dollars to feed a child in Africa then coming to work on Monday and ripping up a good piece of agricultural land," he said.

Sidney Ald. Wilkie Gardner responded saying the argument was a poor one. "It's marginal agricultural land," he said.

"It's never been used agriculturally," said Sherwood.

Meanwhile, peninsula recreation co-ordinator Randy Aubie and volunteers will deliver 2,000 surveys Monday to area residents for specific ideas on the recreation centre.

country we will be tough in repression and determined in the taking of measures that make the construction of socialism in Portugal irreversible," he told the new cabinet.

Anti-Communist rioting has taken three lives and injured dozens of persons in the past week, mainly in the north.

Lisbon newspapers reported new outbreaks today in Bombarral, a small town 45 miles north of Lisbon, and in Braganza, Sao João da Pesqueira, Sao Pedro do Sul, Fafe, Penafiel and Porto de Espada.

The Fafe violence appeared to be triggered by the death of a second anti-Communist demonstrator among six men shot by Communists who sprayed a crowd with automatic rifle fire Wednesday night.

Leftist marines were rushed back into the town 20 miles northeast of Porto and dispersed the crowds with teargas.

The marines were first sent into Fafe early Thursday, but withdrew a few hours later when army infantry units appeared ready to attack them.

Troops also were rushed to Bombarral where they set up barricades to restrict movement in and out of the town. Newspapers said the crowds were growing "from minute to minute."

The newspapers said the crowds were demanding the ouster of the Communist-controlled town council.

used many times in the future."

Victoria Sierra Club spokesman Bruce Hardy said he is not too concerned with the partial lifting of the moratorium in the Tsitika-Schoen area, providing it is done with care and steps are taken to protect other resources.

He observed that the main area of concern is still under the moratorium.

"We are not opposed to logging, but we are opposed to the wasteful practices of logging companies which are responsible for damaging many of our rivers and creeks and erosion of forest lands," he said. "It is no use pretending that logging practices are good in this province.

"They do a better job in Washington and Oregon," he added.

He noted that the Tsitika-Schoen was the last unlogged watershed on the east coast of Vancouver Island and people would "never again see anything like it."

Secretaries 'Demeaned'

recently, from a woman in the government.

Johanna Schalkwyk, secretary to the Human Rights Commission, said the magazine was referred to the commission by Judy Parr, manager-planner with the Islands Trust, a government-appointed body.

De Roo said the reaction of the commission, particularly the two women members, was in strong agreement that the magazine showed "a general lack of respect for womanhood."

The 14-page August edition of Modern Secretary carries articles on Do You Work Intelligently?, on Secret Clues to the Real You (Test Your Personality), on The Chinese Fortune Calendar, and How to Write Great Letters, as well as jokes, beauty tips and dieting tips.

McKenzie said he's written the Florida publisher asking if it has ever run into opposition of this kind.

He said he hasn't decided what to do about the request to stop sending the magazine to government offices, because he might be swamped with calls if he did stop.

Also, McKenzie said he felt the commission was trying to usurp his right to promote his business in a legitimate manner, and the right of many customers to read the magazine.

Monk Office Supply gets the back cover of the magazine to advertise its products.

Nobody forces any women to read the magazine, he said.

"It's kind of like the person who goes to a dirty movie, comes out and goes to the police to complain," he said. Why did the person attend the movie in the first place?

"And I wonder what Remi De Roo is doing about getting women into the priesthood," said McKenzie.

"It seems to me his time would be better spent doing something like that."

WALL-TO-WALL ROBBERY

Two break-ins in the Greater Victoria area in the past week have netted thieves more than $15,000 worth of goods.

Esquimalt police reported Thursday that 38 rolls of carpeting worth $12,832 were stolen sometime last weekend from a warehouse in the basement of a building at 903 Esquimalt.

Owner Gary Jeeves of G. D. Jeeves Enterprises Ltd. did not discover the loss until Monday.

Police said a defective roll was among those taken but thieves left behind one large roll that apparently they could not lift.

In Victoria, police said two cloth bags containing 5,000 English and Irish pennies and halfpennies were stolen from MacDonald's Furniture, Pandora and Broad Wednesday morning. A $380 radio was also taken.

Police said an employee was in the store at the time, working in another section.

Lingua Franca Too Frank!

MONTREAL (CP) — The acronyms COJO and ORTO, identifying two committees established to organize the 1976 Olympic Games, have caused some embarrassment to Canadian diplomats in Argentina.

Alfred Bissonet, Canadian ambassador to Argentina, says in a letter to the external affairs department in Ottawa that COJO and ORTO "are words which in greater Buenos Aires and Uruguayan 'lunfardo' (popular Spanish slang) have a meaning or connotation which make it virtually impossible for my embassy to use them."

In the letter, the ambassador mentioned a 1973 headline in the Montreal French-language newspaper Le Devoir which read: "The government provides $250 million for COJO."

He added: "When snickers were heard among our locally-engaged staff about the enlightened attitude of the Canadian government, the issue was immediately withdrawn from circulation."

WE GOOFED . . . YOU PAY!

OTTAWA (CP) — The taxpayer, not the government, suffers if inaccurate income tax information is given out by district taxation offices.

This, in essence, was the ruling Thursday by the federal tax review board in a case involving a Newfoundland man.

In 1971, the man consulted district taxation officials and took their word on what he owed.

Later, he was notified tht he was $894.90 short. Payment was demanded along with $99.50 interest.

He paid the $894.90 but objected to the interest charge on grounds the district office was responsible for the error.

The tax review board said it was sympathetic. But district office's calculations, right or wrong, "in no way affect the amount of the tax really owing," it ruled.

U.K. TORIES SWEEP AHEAD

LONDON (UPI) — The opposition Conservative party now is leading Prime Minister Harold Wilson's governing Labor Party by 14 per cent in popular favor, according to an opinion poll published today.

Of those polled, 60 per cent said they thought Wilson's Labor government is doing badly, 27 per cent said it is doing well and 13 per cent said they did not know.

The results mean the Conservatives would take office with a 140-seat Parliamentary majority if an election were held now.

Mint Scandal Cited by MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt said today that Gordon Hunter, former master of the Royal Canadian Mint, was driven from his job because he disagreed with plans to hire a large percentage of French-speaking workers at the mint's new facility in Winnipeg.

Cossitt, a frequent critic of the government's official bilingualism policy, said he received a series of letters written by Hunter and Jean-Pierre Goyer, supply minister, whose department is responsible for mint operations.

These documents "show the blatant interference on a prejudiced, racial and linguistic basis by Goyer with the hiring of personnel for the new Winnipeg mint . . .," Cossitt said.

The nef mint facility is in the Winnipeg suburb of St. Boniface, about 33-per-cent French-Canadian.

The plant has a current work force of about 135 and is producing coins, a mint official said, but its official opening has been delayed by a construction strike.

Hunter, a career civil servant and former deputy minister of supply, was replaced as mint master June 6 by Yvon Gariepy, a former commissioner of the Canadian Penitentiary Service.

A spokesman for Goyer's office said Hunter had resigned but a spokesman for Prime Minister Trudeau's office, which made the new appointment, said all the office has is a letter from Hunter "asking to retire."

Hunter, 60, was not available for comment.

Europeans Swelter

Times News Services

Europe's hottest summer in up to 200 years has railway tracks buckling in England and Holland, street vendors in Stockholm running out of ice cream and water rationed in France.

Swedish weathermen said temperatures there were the hottest in 200 years, with the thermometer reaching 101 degrees.

West Germans said the heat set records for this century and in some parts of Spain temperatures rose to 50-year highs.

Europe's summers usually average in the comfortable 70s, and the unaccustomed heat has caused widespread fears of crop failures.

Calder Hits Highway 'Disgrace'

An NDP MLA and former cabinet minister is demanding an investigation into what he calls a "most disgraceful" situation in one of his own government's highway's projects.

Frank Calder (NDP — Atlin) has written Premier Barrett to complain about cancellation of a contract with Ben Ginter Construction Company Ltd. for construction of a portion of the Stewart-Terrace highway.

The contract was awarded nine months ago but recently cancelled because Mid-West Construction Ltd., a related Ginter company which took over the contract, failed to provide a performance bond.

"I just cannot understand how such a contract could be allowed to stand for nine months without some definite government action," said Calder in the letter dated Aug. 5.

The highway's department has "failed miserably," he said, in failing to consider the short northern working season and in not making the contractor to post the required bond.

In urging a complete investigation into the matter, Calder said people in his constituency are greatly concerned about the lack of progress. They had expected better road service this year as a result of the construction job located about 10 miles south of the Nass River bridge, he said.

Highways Minister Graham Lea and other senior department officials were not available for comment today but a spokesman said the department had received a copy of the letter and a report is being prepared for the premier.

Calder said in his letter that because of the time wasted on the cancelled contract work on the highway may not begin until next year.

"In 1972, you promised the local people that this road will be a good all-weather highway. I and the local people have not forgotten your promise," Calder told the premier.

HOME STARTS UP SLIGHTLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Housing construction picked up in July but still is below the monthly rate which Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson says is necessary to meet the government target of 210,000 starts this year.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said today its July survey indicates housing starts at a seasonally-adjusted annual rate of 226,100, up from 204,600 in June.

But, Danson said two months ago, the rate would have to be about 240,000 starts for the rest of the year in order to meet the government target.

THOUSANDS PRAY FOR JOBS

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Thousands of people lined up three abreast, in a queue that stretched 20 blocks, to enter a Roman Catholic church in the suburbs of this Argentiana capital and pray for work.

Every year pilgrims come to the Church of San Cayetano on Aug. 7 to pray to the patron saint of employment. But on Thursday, with Argentina's economy crumbling, the estimated 100,000 worshipers appeared more fervent than usual. Unemployment is nearing 10 per cent of the work force.

"I don't think I saw this many people before," said a resident of the Liniers borough. "Many of them have been waiting to get into the church for 24 hours."

Guerrillas Surrender To Libya Officials

Times News Services

TRIPOLI, Libya — Ten Japenese Red Army terrorists freed their final four hostages and surrendered to Libyan authorities early today, four days after they seized the U.S. embassy in Kuala Lumpur.

Tight security measures were in force at Tripoli airport as the Japan Air Lines DC-8 landed after a 6,900-mile flight from the Malaysian capital, Libya's Arab Revolutionary News Agency reported.

The agency said all aboard the aircraft were safe.

The flight took 15 hours, including a two-hour refuelling stop in Colombo.

The guerrillas, including one woman, surrendered their arms to Libyan authorities and were rushed to the airport VIP lounge. Three ambulances believed carrying the 10 later sped to Tripoli.

Osman Cassim, a Malaysian diplomat and volunteer hostage, said the 10 guerillas remained at the back of the plane throughout the trip while the crew members and hostages stayed up front.

"We had no communications with them at all," he said.

Libyan Communications Minister Nuri Feituri said he and another government official went aboard the plane, parked under floodlights on a runway half a mile from the terminal, and asked the guerrillas for their weapons.

"They surrendered without resistance," he said.

Asked what would happen to the guerrillas, one Libyan official said, "It will be decided in time."

Idi Weds Again . . . For TV Audience

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin has married 19-year-old soldier Sarah Khyolaba for a second time so the ceremony could be shown on the country's new color TV network, Radio Uganda said today.

Amin first married Miss Kyolaba, a member of the Suicide Revolutionary Mechanized Regiment, in a private ceremony in Kampala last Friday. The second ceremony was held publicly Thursday, the broadcast said.

Amin, who is in his 40s, is a Moslem and in recent months he divorced four wives, and now has one other, Madina, who accompanies him on state occasions. Moslem men are allowed to have as many as four wives.

After Thursday's wedding, Amin was quoted by the Uganda Broadcasting Corp. as saying that an underground resistance organization is operating within Uganda.

He said the organization, which he did not name, attempted to sabotage the recent summit meeting in Kampala of the Organization of African Unity.

Amin said the guerrillas attempted to blow up electrical installations on the road from Kampala to the town of Jinja before the summit started. Jinja is about 60 miles east of Kampala.

He said they failed because of the vigilance of his soldiers. "These saboteurs are in custody and will be tried," he said. "If anyone is thinking of staging a coup, it will never succeed."

One Voice in a Greedy Void

The Committee for an Independent Canada, conceived in sincerity, steeped in naivete and ridiculed by its foes, remains a thorn in the side of the economic status quo. At its annual drum beating exercise in Vancouver last weekend CIC National Chairman Robert Page accused Finance Minister John Turner of promising investment dealers complete freedom to obtain money abroad to help finance development in the next decade.

That was a rather liberal interpretation of government intention. What in fact Turner proposed was extending an earlier exemption to cover the non-resident withholding tax on interest payable on government securities issued before 1979. Now the exemption will include interest on long term corporate bonds, debentures and other debt securities, including mortgages. Coupled with another measure which allows business to deduct five per cent of its expenditures on equipment and building, increased foreign investment is a foregone conclusion. A cynic might say it is the government's first step in greasing the fiscal skids for the $10 billion Mackenzie pipeline.

The CIC raises another perplexing point: the finance department is encouraging foreign investment while the department of trade and industry is charged with regulating foreign investment in Canada through the Foreign Investment Review Act. The conundrum unravels somewhat when examining what the act has accomplished since its inception in 1974. Ottawa has approved the takeover of 99 Canadian enterprises, rejected 23 while 25 other applications were withdrawn. Even being charitable the act has only discouraged one half of the takeovers. To give the Trudeau administration its due, it is insisting on Canadian expertise and jobs on foreign owned northern gas plants, even though the national expertise doesn't exist after 20 years of federal indifference.

That about sums up this administration's ad hoc approach to maintaining an independent Canadian economy. Even Petrocan, the instrument through which we were to finally have a share in our own petroleum industry, has been emasculated. The Canadian Development Corporation seems to be as much interested in providing venture capital as it does in ensuring Canadian ownership. Nor is there any national consensus on foreign investment. British Columbia and Ontario provincial administrations warn about its dangers, while actively looking for foreign funds to build pet projects. The Prairies, Maritimes and Quebec slavishly court any foreign funds they can find. Who owns the investment is the least of their worries. Canada's chartered banking monopoly funds projects in every corner of the globe, yet domestic entrepreneurs and governments find more attractive terms on foreign money markets.

Ottawa lacks strong leadership. There is no persuasion or coercion to make banks or other sectors of economy act in the national interest. Each greedy little group goes its own way as the country's blood is siphoned off. The Committee for an Independent Canada has pointed out the symptoms on numerous occasions. But the doctors remain at the feast. If the patient doesn't bleed to death he could die of indifference.

The Last Picture Show?

If Ottawa can be accused of diffidence about preserving the Canadian economy the same cannot be said about Canadian culture. In an effort to incubate Canadian film production, Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner has announced that two large theatre chains will invest $1.7 million in domestic film production and show Canadian films in their theatres at least four weeks each year. Investors will also have a 100 per cent tax write-off for monies poured into films meeting certain Canadian criteria.

Earlier government thrusts in this area include aid to Canadian publishing firms, the Canadian content rules for radio and television, not to mention the Canada Council and a $10 million film development fund. To have to force-feed a nascent culture in a country that has a colonial view of itself is one of Canada's peculiarities. Yet it is hard to fault government efforts in this direction considering the fragile nature of our emerging arts. Through accidents of history and geography Canada has been inundated by British and later, American models. A national identity does emerge in our literature even if the other arts are still largely derivative. Flowers in a bush garden must be carefully tended.

Still, there is much irony in Ottawa's attempts to gild that elusive Canadian identity through the arts. We will spend millions to foster a celluloid image of ourselves, one that Canadians and the rest of the world can point to with pride, saying: "Ah, that is Canada." But deep in the depths of the state secretary's office we know that a culture or identity cannot be legislated through money and orders-in-council. If Ottawa is really serious about preserving a Canadian identity it might consider preserving our economic independence first. Such strong leadership might even give us the basis of a mythology. Instead it would seem we will have the image of ourselves, but there will be nothing behind the screen after the show is over.

WILLIAM SHANNON

What Change Has Done in U.S.

WASHINGTON — There is widespread disillusionment with government, big business, labor unions and other major institutions.

Politically, this expresses itself in an uneasy mood that resembles conservatism but is more nearly passivity and a withdrawal from world and national concerns to those of family and community.

Such periods of disarray have occurred before. When the U.S. was preparing to celebrate its centennial in 1876, the corruption of the Grant administration, the frustrations of Reconstruction in the south, and the severe economic depression beginning in 1873 produced a comparable decline in national morale.

But unsettling cultural influences exist today that were unknown in the past. Among many serious intellectuals as well as among the commercially motivated tastemakers in the popular media, for example, there reigns what the British critic Christopher Booker has termed "neophilia" — a love of the new simply because it is new. There is a cult of change.

Started in 1955?

Human perceptions and social needs do change, but that is only half the truth. The other half is that the enduring constants of human nature do not change. There is in every human spirit a tension between aggression and tenderness, between selfishness and self-sacrifice.

The cult of change is peculiarly inappropriate as a basis for analyzing and guiding American society today. Looking at the United States over the last 20 years we can readily see that the U.S. is a society that has been racked by change.

Twenty years ago this fall, American schools were making their first efforts to comply with the U.S. supreme court's school desegregation decision — "all deliberate speed" — of the previous year. It marked the beginning of the civil rights revolution that was to move to the lunch counter, the voting booth and the place of work.

Although a serious gap still exists between the living standards of blacks and whites, a traditionally exploited racial minority has moved into the mainstream of society. It was a brilliant juridical and political accomplishment of which Americans can be proud.

Yet the civil rights revolution unavoidably subjected American society to severe stress. If the United States had been required to cope with no other problem in these last two decades, the racial issue in all its complex ramifications would have taxed the nation's moral wisdom and political skill, its capacity to shed habits and suppress prejudices, its ability to compromise and to innovate — in short, its capacity for change.

The striving for racial equality was change in a positive direction, but change can also be for the worse. Thus, the serious inflation of recent years has changed the value of American money and has had a debilitating effect on Americans' confidence in planning the future.

VIETNAM DEMONSTRATION
... war produced myriad changes

Change can also be ambiguous. The Vietnam war and the domestic turmoil surrounding it altered the U.S. perception of itself in world affairs in ways that are salutary and others that are damaging.

In human relationships, change is not limited to blacks and smaller minorities such as Indians and Chicanos. Women and homosexuals are also pressing for genuine equality.

The supreme court has been an agent of social change not only in outlawing racial discrimination but in several other spheres as well.

It has abolished prayer in the public schools, effectively barred public financial assistance to church-related schools, legalized abortion, greatly loosened restrictions against pornographic movies, and reformed the way in which state legislatures are apportioned.

These many different changes have naturally varied in their impact and seriousness. Some have touched the whole society, while others have struck some persons and touched many other persons not at all.

No change occurs without a cost to someone, be it an economic or political or psychic cost, be it tangible or intangible. A people can bear only so many costs at one time. A society, like an individual, can only bear so much stress.

Need Is Discernible

While U.S. society has been undergoing these large and small transformations, its politics has been convulsed by assassinations, confrontations and startling scandals. What is needed in these circumstances is political leadership that can provide people with a renewed sense of competence and of control over their own destiny.

Ideally, such a leadership would respond to both the conservative and the liberal impulses of society. It would respond to the liberal passion for justice and to the conservative respect for order and established institutions. It would recognize that if constructive changes are to succeed, people need time and leadership in re-ordering their lives to take account of them.

It would hold out the hope of progress but also the reassurance of reasonable stability. Such leadership would be an exercise in politics of the highest order, much more demanding than an easy radicalism that promises new things it cannot deliver or a stalwart reactionary faith that rejects everything new.

No such leadership is now clearly visible on the horizon. But in society's great conversation about itself that is politics, the first step toward meeting a need is discerning the shape of that need.

W. A. WILSON

Secrecy and the Law Don't Mix

OTTAWA — Back in 1969 an amendment was added to the criminal code permitting judges to prohibit publication of evidence put forward at the preliminary hearing of an accused person.

It was conceived and passed by parliament with the best of motives, as an added protection aimed at guaranteeing an accused a fair trial. Part of the purpose was simply to avoid affecting the climate of opinion in which the actual trial is held. Part of it was based on the fact that not all evidence introduced at a preliminary hearing is found to be admissible at the subsequent trial.

It has proven to be, however, a reform with a ruinous flaw. It can expose innocent people who happen to be mentioned in any way at the preliminary hearing to campaigns of calumny, especially if they are politically active or otherwise controversial, under circumstances in which they have no possible means of defending themselves. This can occur because the amendment, section 467 of the code, prevents publication of the preliminary hearing evidence but does not prevent people reading the transcripts, talking about them or distorting them.

Both Suffered

None of this is just supposition. Federal Labor Minister John Munro and Solicitor General George Kerr of Ontario have just been through precisely this experience. Both men suffered. Munro's health came close to breaking under the strain. Kerr, convinced that in time he would be cleared, felt that the legal duties of his office compelled him to resign as long as there were rumors that he could not fend off.

Their names had been mentioned at the preliminary hearing of Kenneth Elliott, the Hamilton harbor commissioner subsequently convicted of accepting bribes and sentenced to a substantial prison term.

The preliminary hearing evidence was suppressed but rumors flew about and, because detailed replies in either the federal parliament or the Ontario legislature would have been reported in violation of the spirit of section 467, both men were badly constrained in their efforts to cope with the problem. When the trial judge was summing up, he told the jury that Elliott had dragged "innocent public officials into the proceedings ... and without one shred or iota of evidence" against him. That is something to think about. There should be evidence, and a good deal of it, before men are put through the sort of ordeal in federal parliament, provincial legislature and the press that Munro and Kerr suffered.

GEORGE KERR
... smeared by McCarthyites?

Kerr has been reinstated in his cabinet office and Munro's health seems to have recovered. They came out of the matter well. But there are a good many others who have not.

Dr. Morton Shulman, the flamboyant NDP member of the Ontario legislature is one. He was the first to drag the evidence into public, using his position in the legislature to do it. David Lewis, then NDP national leader, publicly accused Munro of impeding the RCMP investigation into the Hamilton harbor scandal and always refused to apologize for the statement, although later on RCMP Commissioner M. J. Nadon told a parliamentary committee that neither Munro nor anyone else impeded the work of the force.

Conservative members of parliament here, led by Munro's Hamilton rival, MP Lincoln Alexander, joined the hue and cry and for a time no reasonable man could possibly have doubted that an attempt was under way to destroy the labor minister while he was unable to make an adequate defence. Much of the press did not come out of the affair any better than the politicians because there was too much readiness to treat the two men as if they must be guilty of something. There was the indefensible invention of the word Harborgate for the Hamilton affair in an attempt to link it with the stench associated with the word Watergate, although there was no common ground between the two.

Need for Repeal

If there is any saving grace in this, it is that a moderately reassuring number of editorialists, columnists and commentators protested against the campaign that was going on. While there was no justification for the word Harborgate there was plenty for calling the anti-Munro and anti-Kerr campaigns McCarthyism. That is what they were.

Kerr has his cabinet job back and one hopes that in the impending Ontario election he will fare well. Munro has written two forceful letters to his constituents, critical of much that happened but fair to those who were fair to him, and again decent men must hope that his constituents believe him and the trial judge, not the men who campaigned on the basis of rumors.

The greatest need that emerges from the Kerr-Munro affair is the repeal of section 467 of the criminal code. Well-intentioned though it was, it is too dangerous a provision to have in the law. That should not come as much of a surprise. Long tradition ought by now to have taught us that secrecy in legal proceeses is always dangerous. In the great tradition of English law, processes are open, not for the titillation of the public, but for the protection of the accused and the entire judical system. Openness is the safeguard against abuse. We have just seen gross abuse flow from section 467. The time has come to revert to tradition that has been proven sound by centuries of experience.

Inflation Dilemma

The massive wheat sales to Russia have been enthusiastically received as a shot in the arm to the North American economy by a lot of people and undoubtedly some will benefit, but when it means increases in the price of the staff of life to people already hard pressed to pay for the necessities of life, one wonders if the powers that be are doing their thing properly. Or is this just another straw on the camel's back? There are convincing trends that in many happenings "the tail does wag the dog." That massive increase in salary to MPs recently seems about to be repeated in the U.S. There is another angle to consider and that is the background of some very influential people and that old saw about leopards and spots. The way inflation is tied in with the plans of people that would like nothing better than the destruction of our way of life is an indication that greed is getting the better of a lot of people's common sense. Because there is every likelihood that if the crunch comes they'll lose their shirts too and heaven knows that's plenty. There is a report that a B.C., IWA official has been invited to sit on the 22-member labor relations board in Ottawa. We have a good example of successful industrial relations in Germany. It's likely both parties will have to accept a sawoff eventually, so why not save the taxpayer money?—R. S. Jones, Victoria.

Improved Television

The Victoria branch of the Association for Public Broadcasting in B.C. was pleased to hear that the Canadian Radio-Television Commission has postponed the allocation of Channel 10 and turned down all commercial applications for it.

Hopefully the CBC and provincial government will jointly be given the licence and will combine to give the community good quality educational programming as well as public participation in programs of local interest.

The work involved in writing interventions against granting of Channel 10 to private stations, was well rewarded—but we must not stop here. We must continue the struggle for improved television fare.

Fall meetings will be scheduled soon. —Berta Schmidt, Secretary, Victoria APBBC, 65 Arden Rd., R.R.6, Victoria.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of August 8, 1915

A movement to supply old and spare razors to the men at the front is receiving growing support from various firms and individuals throughout the country. An appeal originating from Lord Kitchener has been issued and hardware dealers have taken action, volunteering to collect and ship any donated. Several thousand have been turned in so far in Canada, while in England 70,000 razors have been collected. There is a shortage of new razors at present because the majority of English razor-makers have enlisted and now are at the front in France.

British Middle Class Up Against the Wall—and Angry

CAMBRIDGE, England — In the fading glory of the Victorian age George Bernard Shaw aptly defined that pillar of British society, the middle-class family unit. It consisted, GBS said, of "a moderately honest man with a moderately faithful wife, moderate drinkers both, in a moderately healthy house." The description still holds, but today the British middle class is immoderately angry.

Take Andrew Hall, 43, a Cambridge architect. In another era he would be financially secure, relatively content, perhaps even smug. Now, he says, the British middle-class family is "up against the wall."

He means people like himself earning the equivalent of $10,000 to $24,000 a year. For them, he says, "everything is downhill." Hall blames fierce taxation and an inflation roaring along at the rate of 20 per cent or more a year.

The Cambridge architect recently cancelled his life-insurance premiums because, he says, in 10 years his $43,000 policy will be worth less than $1,700 as a result of inflation's ravages. He has decided to borrow as much as he can, using his home as security, to put his 12-year-old son Peter through a local "public" (private) school.

Life has changed for Andrew Hall. "I haven't seen a play in London in two years. I only eat in restaurants on business. Can't afford the gardener once a week any more.

"You start adding it all up, and it amounts to a social revolution. I find myself making fewer phone calls, writing fewer letters and taking fewer trips. The cost of all these services has doubled in the past year.

"And to halve our fuel bill, I'm taking only an occasional hot bath."

Richard Blackwell is chairman of a well-known firm of booksellers in Oxford, a family firm founded in the Victorian era. He complains that the staff has been taking a constantly "bigger whack" of profits, and that "we have been working hard and getting poorer for years." Now, he fears, "nemesis is around the corner."

To Blackwell "nemesis" is threatened by the capital transfer tax adopted this spring. The tax, closing the remaining loopholes in the transfer of wealth from father to son, would require the next generation of Blackwells to pay about one-third of the firm's net valuation in taxes.

Blackwell's concern is shared by other members of the middle class, who fear that the law will doom such family firms as the corner grocery, the local garage and boutique, the small farm and restaurant.

The way the law works a farmer would have to pay about $180,000 to turn over his $600,000 farm to his son.

If the farm were heavily mortgaged, as many British farms are, and the farmer had no other major assets, he simply would not be able to raise the money. If the son inherited the farm, he would be able under the law to pay the taxes over an eight-year period, but the fear is that interest charges would be so great that he would instead be forced to sell out.

If this weren't enough to try the patience of the patient middle class, the Labor government plans to introduce a "wealth tax" next fall. The tax rates have not been announced yet, but the bill would place an annual tax on all property and assets worth more than $240,000.

That British institution, The Times of London, recently published an editorial on the middle class that brought an avalanche of letters to the editor.

By the Times' definition, anyone who owned his own house or worked at a white-collar job was a member of the middle class. That, the Times figured, was at least half of Britain.

"Any job, however junior, that is on a ladder of promotion naturally produces those attitudes of competitive ambition which lie at the heart of middle class culture," the Times said. "Any person who sees life as a process of effort and improvement has accepted the main principle."

The ethos of the middle class, according to the Times, amounted to this: "I want to lead as successful and creative a life as I can, because I believe that will be best both for me and for society. I want my children to have the best chance to lead a similar life."

The middle class applauded, but the radicals within the Labor Party were not impressed. They see the present moment as presenting the opportunity of a breakthrough to the classless society.

The leftists, still minority with Labor, noisily advocate a program of "irreversible change," including massive nationalization, the abolishment of private alternatives in health and education, and confiscatory taxes that would wipe out all hereditary wealth.

One of their leaders, Labor Member of Parliament Robert Kilroy-Silk, says: "Our program calls for radical and swift changes, and these will not be achieved unless we have the courage to assert that we are right and the will to see that what we want is accomplished. We should certainly not be too frightened of upsetting people."

Westernized Middle Class Dominates Japanese Life

(The Second of Three Articles)

TOKYO — At 6:30 a.m., the alarm clock rings in the bedroom of the Ushiyama family on the outskirts of the city. Husband, wife and two small children are sleeping side by side in their padded futon, the traditional on-the-floor bedding used by most Japanese. Because of the overcrowding in this small island chain and accepted patterns of living, more than half of Japanese couples sleep in the same room as their children, and about a fourth of the families are forced to use this bedroom for their meals as well.

Mutsumi Ushiyama rises first and slips into the narrow kitchen—just large enough for one person to stand—to prepare breakfast for her family. In this "modern household" the fare is often homemade corn or vegetable soup and toast. If rice is left over from dinner the night before, however, a more traditional breakfast of rice, pickle slices and steaming miso (soybean paste) soup is served.

Like about 40 per cent of Japanese families these days, the Ushiyamas eat their meals at a "dining set" of western-style table and chairs, in this case set up in the tiny nine-by-nine-foot room which serves as the main living-dining-television area.

Before breakfast Mutsumi stands for a few moments before the small Shinto and the Buddhist altars which share a nook on the wall by the door. She lights three sticks of incense and placed them on the Buddhist altar for good luck and tribute to the ancestors.

Six-Day Week

Sohji Ushiyama leaves the house by bicycle or motorbike six days a week at 7:30 a.m. for his office in a neighboring suburb. A landscape gardener by training and education, he works with his father and brother in a small family construction firm. Daughter Mima, who is 4, walks to nursery school with her mother at 9 a.m. Son Kentaro, who is too young for school at 3, plays in the house or the narrow lane on which it fronts.

Both children are home for lunch and eat their supper at 5:30 p.m., a half hour or so before their parents. The children are bathed in the deep plastic Japanese-style bath near the kitchen and are put to bed early behind the sliding doors of the bedroom. Except on evenings when Sohji is entertaining or being entertained on business—nearly always without his wife—the parents read, talk or watch television together in the living room before turning in at 11 p.m.

Because of the husband's position in a family business the Ushiyamas are a cut above the average in income, but they are well within the broad middle class which dominates Japanese life. Although by no means a classless society, Japan since World War II has made great strides in reducing the extremes of wealth and poverty which bedevil many capitalist countries.

Studies show that income distribution among wage-earning households is considerably more equal than in the United States, Britain or France, and there is little urban-rural income disparity. According to a recent public opinion survey, 90 per cent of the Japanese consider themselves to be middle class. Probably they are right.

Third in World

Thirty years after the end of World War II, Japan is third in the world in gross national product. Japan also has the sixth largest population (110 million). Japan's per-person share of GNP in 1973 was $2,955, the eighth highest in the world. (The United States was at the top with $5,065).

These figures are somewhat misleading, however, although defence and governmental social spending is relatively low, an unusually high proportion of Japan's national income has been plowed into private investment to build and renovate its vast and efficient production works. Per capita disposable income available to the average Japanese in 1973 was $2,492. Because of the habit of saving, the semi-annual bonus system and fears of hard times ahead, about $600 per person of this was put into savings. Actual consumption was $1,869, or about $78 per person per week. Although hardly a princely sum, it is more than three times the personal consumption spending of a decade before and by far the highest level in Asia.

The great majority of Japanese husbands turn their paycheques over to their wives, who keep detailed accounts and budgets and who rebate "pocket money" to the husband for drinking, gambling and other male pursuits. Perhaps in part because women hold the purse strings, nearly every family has invested freely on household conveniences as incomes have risen steadily in the postwar era.

Women hold the purse strings in an increasingly materialistic society

Rapid Change

The list of what the average family owns today demonstrates the extremely rapid change since the early postwar era, and Japan's development into one of the world's largest domestic consumer markets. According to a government survey in February, the holdings include: washing machine, 97 per cent of Japanese households; refrigerator, 96 per cent; electric fan, 94 per cent; electric carpet sweeper, 91 per cent; sewing machine, 34 per cent; stainless sink, 72 per cent; telephone, 80 per cent; color television set, 90 per cent; black and white television set, 48 per cent; radio, 77 per cent; stereo, 52 per cent; tape recorder, 51 per cent; guitar, 28 per cent; organ, 22 per cent; ski set, 16 per cent; golf clubs, 14 per cent.

Some of the world's most rapid changes in health, life expectancy, family size and other fundamentals have been experienced in Japan since World War II. As dramatic evidence, nearly all Japanese born in the past three decades grow to be taller than their parents and average height is still growing. A recent survey showed that 15-year-old students, on the average, are as tall as 17-year-old students only a decade ago. In 1967, the Ministry of Education was forced to revise the standard sizes of desks and chairs in Japanese classrooms to accommodate a generation of children who had "outgrown" them.

FUNDS RAISED FOR 'ORPHANS' ARMING IRA

By ANDREW STEPHEN
London Observer

When a bullet is fired from an Armalite AR-15 rifle it travels 3,285 feet per second: at one-third of a mile it will pierce both sides of a steel helmet and leave a hole the size of a fist in a man's head. Snce 1971, 285 British soldiers have been killed in Northen Ireland — many of them shot dead by Armalite rifles. Most Armalites are manufactured under licence in Tokyo, and then transported to the United States.

Exactly two years ago Washington police received an anonymous tip-off that the Provisional IRA were shipping Armalites to Northern Ireland. Immediately a long-haired, trendily moustached detective, 27-year-old Edward Jagen, was put on the case and ordered to infiltrate the Irish community in the area.

"I hung around Irish bars in Washington 16 hours a day, seven days a week, for 11 months," he says. "My cover was being an artist. Two months later they introduced me to 'Belfast Harry.' He asked me if I would paint some paintings to sell them to raise money for orphans. I said sure, I'd do that.

"They raised at least $50,000 like that. Sometimes, Harry had as much as $4,000 cash with him when he was buying guns. I didn't think he was in it for the money, but it gave him a tremendous sense of self-importance. He made trips to Belfast about three times a year and I guess they made him feel like a big shot over there.

"He told me that to make a point you had to kill people. He would brag about particular people being killed—especially once, I remember, when two policemen were blown up. It was hard to pretend I liked him," Jagen says. As a result of his undercover surveillance "Belfast Harry" — 31 year old Henry Hillick — and three gun-running colleagues, two of them from Ireland, were sent to prison for six years at a Baltimore court last year.

They had bought 175 AR-15s — costing about $190 each — from two of the country's 160,000 licensed gun dealers: first from Jon Crawford's gun shop in Washington, and then from William Westerland's in Baltimore.

Each time they needed to do nothing more than produce their driving licences and testify that they were residents of the district or state, and that they had not been guilty of any offence carrying a sentence of more than one year's imprisonment. On one occasion Westerland even helped load 70 Armalites into a car boot outside his shop, no questions asked. At least 100 of the AR-15s which he sold are almost certainly now in the hands of the Provisional IRA in Northern Ireland.

The U.S. authorities kept the gun-runners under surveillance for weeks, using cars, helicopters and planes. Their extraordinary diligence in tracking down the offenders — for what was, in an American context, the comparatively trivial game of illegally transporting guns across state lines — coincided with a concerted effort by the U.S. government to restrict IRA activity in America.

Following continued pressure since 1971 from the Irish and British governments, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger quietly ordered his department last November to "examine more closely" IRA fund-raising in the United States.

From describing the Provisional IRA as "freedom fighters" in a 1972 Department of State Bulletin, the U.S government has changed its tune so markedly that it now feels able to accuse the purportedly charitable Irish Northern Aid Committee of raising money for guns and explosives. It refuses to allow well-known Provisionals, such as David O'Connell, Rory O'Brady or Seamus Loughran, into the country, although sometimes their wives come instead.

Masked IRA gunman in Londonderry

The Irish Northern Aid Committee, covering more than 70 branches across the United States and Canada, is run from a grubby shop in the heartland of New York's Bronx area its window flanked with the inevitable rubber bullet and signs saying things like "Brit Thugs Out" — by three IRA veterans in their seventies.

Whatever lies behind the deliberately obscured exterior, it is undeniably true that the bulk of the Provisional guns — including not only Armalites, but the equally deadly military M-16 version, rocket launchers and Browning machine-guns — come from this country. Some put the figure as high as 90 per cent, and though serial numbers are now normally filed off the barrels before they are shipped over, guns have been traced back to nine separate gun deals in the United States.

Since 1972, there have been 12 cases of gun-running to Northern Ireland before American courts, resulting in 10 convictions and involving 10 men. Two more cases are pending and investigations are pressing ahead in several cities across the United States. If charges are laid in one of the cases currently being investigated in Philadelphia, it will prove to be the biggest case of IRA gun-running yet.

All the INAC acolytes make no secret of their support for the Provisional IRA. In their shop they sell "IRA" badges and "IRA All the Way" T-shirts; at a fund-raising concert at the Gaelic Park in the Bronx — where the primary fund-raising feature was the raffling of a $3,000 car given by an Irish garage-owner — supporters wore them proudly.

The apparent respectability of the IRA's backers is bolstered by a highly professional weekly newspaper, the Irish People, printed from INAC's Bronx address. Each week it catalogues English sins and Provo glories, interspersed with its own unique analysis of Ulster events. Thus the reader finds that a Protestant woman, an old age pensioner, killed in an explosion at her cottage last month, far from being an innocent old woman, in fact ran an "SAS (Special Air Service) murder factory" for killing Catholics.

Meanwhile the raffles, contests, dinners, dances and collections on behalf of the IRA continues apace, as does the gun-running in machinery crates and, sometimes, coffins. And a contract has been put out in the Washington underworld for the murder of Edward Jagen, the undercover policeman. The going rate that a professional hit man requires in the area for killing a policeman is $100,000, and so far the local Provo gun-running unit has not been able to raise that amount. But they are still hoping.

Modest Decline At Toronto

Prices at Toronto settled into a modest decline in light mid-afternoon trading today.

Activity was slow with 743,000 shares traded by 2 p.m., down from 760,000 at the same time Thursday.

Declines outnumbered advances 159 to 138 with 203 issues unchanged.

Trading resumed in Western supplies A at the opening following a five-session halt. The chairman and president of the company said they have rejected a $40-a-share offer by Inter-City Gas Ltd. for their 35-per-cent interest in the company. Western Supplies A had not traded by 2 p.m. and last closed at $25. Inter-City fell 15 cents to $4.40.

Trading was halted at the opening in Canada Machinery Corp. pending an announcement. Canada Machinery last traded Dec. 31, 1971 at $29.

Vulcan Industrial Packaging dropped ¾ to $12½. Bushnell Communications 65 cents to $4.35, Peoples Department Stores ½ to $6¼ and Eastern Canada Savings ½ to $11¾.

Dome Pete gained ⅝ to $28¾. Automotive Hardware A ½ to $12½, Dominion Stores ½ to $17¼ and Toronto Dominion Bank ¾ to $43⅜.

Losses among mines included Camflo, down ¼ to $13½, Kerr Addison A ¼ to $12½, and United Keno Hill ⅛ to $12¼. Cyprus Anvil rose ¼ to 89¼ and Madeleine 21 cents to $2.52.

Among oils, Total Pete lost ¼ to $6⅝ and Skye Resources 17 cents to $2.05 while Canadian Merrill gained ½ to $5¾.

New York

The market was widely mixed Friday, wavering between conflicting economic news.

Losers outpaced gainers by about a 7-to-5 margin in light trading at New York.

Analysts noted some hopes for an easing off in upward pressure on interest rates, based on the virtually leveling off in the money supply for July shown in Federal Reserve Board figures issued late thursday.

But the effects of the recent rise in open market money rates continued to make themselves felt, with New York's First National City Bank raising its prime lending rate to 7¾ from 7½ per cent.

Brokers also noted that the market's worries over inflation were underscored when U.S. Steel announced price increases averaging 3.8 per cent. A couple of other large steel producers had posted larger increases earlier in the week.

U.S. Steel shares rose ⅞ to $62⅞.

International Minerals and Chemicals, which reported sharply higher quarterly earnings, picked up

$339,336 Damages

VANCOUVER (CP) — Trans Mountain Pipeline Co. Ltd. was awarded damages of $339,366 against Nicola Valley Sawmills Ltd. at the conclusion of an action Thursday in the British Columbia Supreme Court.

The action by Trans Mountain concerned an incident in April, 1971, when a washout of soil caused a break in its Edmonton-Vancouver oil pipeline, about 20 miles south of Merritt, B.C.

Mr. Justice D. R. Verchere, in a written judgment, said Trans Mountain blamed the sawmill company's nearby logging operation for the washout.

The judge said a wide washout occurred of soil supporting and surrounding the pipeline over a distance of about 200 feet north of where it crossed a gully.

He said the cleanup and repair work involved cost Trans Mountain $339,366, and the company's suit was to recover that sum as damages.

Mr. Justice Verchere found that the sawmill company had demonstrated "a lack of reasonable care to avoid injuring a neighbor."

He held that the sawmill company was "liable in nuisance" to Trans Mountain and the pipeline company is therefore entitled to recover its costs in damages.

Car, Truck Sale Records Fall

Canadian Press

The three largest Canadian automobile manufacturers left old sales records by the wayside in July, figures released Wednesday show.

Only General Motors of Canada Ltd. showed a drop in passenger car sales, although truck deliveries reached a new high.

GM reported record truck sales of 10,078 units, 2.7 per cent above sales for July, 1974.

Passenger car sales totalled 30,160 units, slightly lower than the figure of 31,219 sold in the same month last year.

However, Chrysler of Canada reported record sales in both cars and trucks 2.3 per cent above the sales record set in July last year.

Chrysler delivered a total of 21,842 cars and trucks in July, surpassing the old July record of 21,350 units, set last year.

Passenger car sales were reported as 17,740 units, an increase of 4.2 per cent over the previous all-time record of 17,018 set last July.

Ford of Canada released figures showing both car and truck sales higher than last year.

Ford sold 29,125 cars and trucks, 3.7 per cent more than the record 28,093 sold in July, 1974.

Passenger car sales totalled 19,119, up 1.1 per cent over the previous July record of 18,903, set last year.

Truck sales, at 10,006 units were 8.9 per cent higher than the July, 1974, level of 9,190.

The companies attributed much of the success of the month to the Ontario government's five-per-cent rebate on most North American cars, announced in the last provincial budget.

In addition, William Hawkins, vice-president and general manager for Ford of Canada, said the sales figures indicate the economy is rallying into a recovery after the slump of recent months.

U.K. BANKS HIKE RATE FOR LOANS

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's four major independent banks announced Tuesday they are raising their basic interest rates for loans to 10 per cent from 9½ per cent.

The move had been widely expected since the Bank of England raised its minimum lending rate to 11 from 10 per cent July 25. The change by the four banks — Barclay's, Lloyd's, National Westminster and Midland — will take effect Wednesday.

For AMC's Spring Pacer Sets Hot Pace

DETROIT (UPI) — American Motors Corp. has reported it earned $10.1 million in its spring quarter, reversing a string of three straight quarterly deficits of more than $60 million.

Chairman Roy D. Chapin and President William V. Luneburg predicted another profitable quarter between July and September, but said the firm would show a loss for its fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 because of the huge losses earlier in the year.

Despite the profit, AMC directors voted to omit paying the regular 10-cent semi-annual dividend, following the lead of the firm's bigger competitors who have either cut out or reduced dividends this year.

Chapin and Luneburg said the new small Pacer, now grabbing more than half of all AMC sales, got the major credit for the turnaround performance, by early September, Pacer production will be up to 800 cars a day, 50 per cent higher than when it went into production in January.

In the year-ago period, AMC earned $19 million before slipping into the red.

Top Mountie's Term Extended

OTTAWA (CP) — Next summer's Olympic Games and the Marin inquiry report, expected this fall, are among the main reasons RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon's term has been extended for an additional 18 months, to Sept. 1, 1977.

"There are a number of other projects they'd like me to see through," Commissioner Nadon said in an interview Thursday night, referring to Prime Minister Trudeau, who announced the extension earlier in the day, and Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

Among them are probably a frontal assault on organized and corporate crime, a developing commercial crime squad and fundamental changes in the security service.

Commissioner Nadon also will be responsible for the security of thousands of athletes and visiting statesmen at the Olympic Games in Montreal next July. About 1,200 to 1,500 Mounties will be detailed to the Games, along with thousands of servicemen and provincial and municipal policemen.

The 18-month extension will carry him well past the Olympics however, and the main reason may be the internal adjustments the Marin inquiry, currently drafting a report on the way the RCMP handles citizen's complaints and internal matters, recommends to the government.

The commission was appointed more than a year ago after a series of unprecedented public meetings of Mounties discussing, among other simmering issues, formation of a union.

The government responded with a hefty 1974 pay increase and appointment of the inquiry under Judge Rene Marin. The commissioner, meanwhile, instituted overtime pay and a divisional representative system to enable the rank-and-file to have a voice in issues that affect them.

Eskimos Hit Airstrip Shutdowns

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department has shut down two remote Arctic airstrips, calling them suitable only for emergencies, a move that has drawn criticism from the national Eskimo brotherhood.

The brotherhood, Inuit Tapirisat, said in a news release Thursday that notice of the closure was received Wednesday by Kenting Aviation, a Calgary-based company that services the strips.

They are at Grise Fjord at the southern end of Ellesmere Island and at Arctic Bay, on the northern tip of Baffin Island.

Grise Fjord has a population of about 100 and Arctic Bay, a staging point for personnel and supplies for a mining operation at Strathcona Sound, N.W.T., has about 300 residents.

Inuit Tapirisat said the move effectively halts air service to the communities, their only link with the rest of Canada through Resolute, N.W.T., from which Kenting operates Twin-Otter air service.

Josiah Kadlutsiak, vice-president of the Eskimo organization, has sent telegrams to Prime Minister Trudeau, Transport Minister Jean Marchand and Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan, protesting the closure

Cruise Missiles Lead Arms Race

By MURREY MANDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — Strategic cruise missiles are the latest product of leapfrog technology to confound efforts to control the nuclear arms race.

In basic concept, cruise missiles are an old weapon which initially failed to make the grade in sustained American military interest. Technological advances in microelectronics, computers, and electromagnetic sensors now make cruise missiles a potential fourth strategic weapon, alongside long-range land and sea-launched ballistic missiles and bombers.

Cruise missiles are descendants of the V-1 "buzz bombs" of the Second World War which Nazi Germany launched against Britain. In the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, the sinking of the Israeli destroyer Elath by the Soviet-developed Styx cruise missile opened what some weaponeers called "a new era in naval warfare."

American developers raced to catch up, and overtake, the Soviets who had an array of tactical cruise missiles, which were insignificant in the American weapons lists.

The result is a new acronym in American military jargon—LRCM, for Long-Range Cruise Missile, small enough to be put into the torpedo tubes of American submarines.

Even though the U.S. weapon has yet to be assembled and proved, recently released testimony shows that its potentials aroused "some deep concerns" among Soviet specialists "as expressed to the people that were at Vladivostok" there, last November, President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev laid the groundwork for a new accord to limit nuclear weapons in strategic arms limitation talks—SALT-II.

In hearings before a Senate armed services subcommittee in April, now public in censored form, Chairman Thomas J. McIntyre (Dem.-N.H.) asked:

"How could the Soviets tell if an attack submarine carried cruise missiles, and whether they had strategic or tactical ranges?"

"They couldn't," replied Malcolm Currie, director of defence research and engineering.

"Unverifiable?" pressed Sen. McIntyre.

"Look at it the other way; we can't either," said U.S. Navy Capt. W. M. Locke, the defense department's cruise missile project manager.

A cruise missile is essentially a pilotless aircraft, propelled by an air-breathing engine, which can carry a conventional or nuclear warhead.

It is designed to fit into the 21-inch diameter torpedo tubes of a submarine, with folded wings, or to be launched by manned bombers in a larger version. B-52 bombers could carry up to 20 of the long-range weapons and the planned B-1 bomber could launch 24 cruise missiles, according to data in the hearing.

Currie testified:

"This is a missile which flies several hundred feet above the ground, with an entirely new type of guidance system. It flies the nap of the earth right close to the ground and is, therefore, able to get in under the air defences of the Soviet Union."

A miniturized computer aboard the missile matches the terrain stored in its memory with images of the earth's surface detected by sensors, and a guidance system corrects the flight pattern.

With a range of 1,500 or more miles in the air-launched version, the missile is seen as "a new life" for the B-52 bomber, enabling it to launch missiles at targets deep inside the Soviet Union, without exposing the manned bomber itself to enemy attack. For this reason, some air force strategists are unenthusiastic, fearing that the cruise missile can undercut their justification for proceeding with the controversial B-1 bomber.

The price of the long-range cruise missile is estimated in the $500,000 to $1 million range per missile, about a tenth the cost of a land-based intercontinental ballistic missile. Development costs for the program, however, reportedly would run into several billion dollars. Only research funds have been authorized so far.

Turkey Pressures U.S. Base Cuts

Manchester Guardian

ANKARA — Turkey will ask the United States to dismantle its bases on Turkish soil as of Sept. 30 and withdraw its troops if the congressional arms embargo is not lifted by then, a well-informed source said here Wednesday.

The U.S. embassy here declined to make any comment.

It is not known exactly what form the closure will take if the embargo is not lifted. But the source said he expects virtually all bases to be phased out gradually and the remaining few to be put under NATO command.

U.S. sources said that the Pentagon does not intend to ship out equipment or military personnel until Turkey reaches a final decision.

The Turkish government stopped the operational activities of all but one of the 27 U.S. bases here 11 days ago as a riposte to the embargo, but stopped short of dismantling them. A high-powered Turkish army inspection team, consisting of two major generals, a brigadier general and two colonels, Tuesday began inspecting the bases. The officers are experts in electronics and communications and over 10 days will decide whether the stoppage of operations is in line with the order. U.S. military personnel continue to live on the bases.

The only U.S. base still operating is the strategic Incirlin air base in Southern Turkey.

The One Key Pen Witness Stayed Silent to End

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Farris Commission has finished its inquiry into the hostage-taking at the British Columbia Penitentiary in nearby New Westminster without hearing from the one man who might have been able to tell it who killed hostage Mary Steinhauser.

In a brief, three-point statement issued Thursday, commission counsel John Rowan said it had been decided not to hear prisoner Andy Bruce because Bruce refused to answer "several key questions" during an iterview.

Rowan said the commission now has concluded its hearings and hopes to have its report to the Commissioner of Penitentiaries in a month to six weeks.

The commission, headed by Chief Justice John Farris of the B.C. Court of Appeal, has been sitting in public and private since June 16, with several adjournments.

In the later stages chief Justice Farris accused penitentiary supervisor Albert Hollinger of intentionally mixing up guns issued to guards to ensure the identity of the man who shot Miss Steinhauser would never be known.

Miss Steinhauser, a classification officer and one of 15 hostages held 41 hours by Bruce and two other knife-wielding prisoners, was fatally shot as a tactical squad of guards opened fire on the area in which she was being confined. The ordeal began June 9.

Bruce was wounded in the gunfire and prisoners Dwight Lucas and Claire Wilson were arrested. All three now face a number of charges. They all were serving life terms for violent crimes.

After the accusation against Hollinger, Rowan said the commission wanted to hear Bruce's version of events "providing he was willing to tell all."

Earlier evidence indicated Bruce might have been in a position to see who shot Miss Steinhauser.

Rowan interviewed Bruce for 90 minutes on July 31 and a four-page record made by a Lawyer acting for the prisoner was given to the commission.

The interview covered details of the last few minutes of the incident, during which the shots were fired.

Rowan's statement Thursday said:

"I have been instructed by the chairman of the commission, Chief Justice Farris, to say:

"The commission has concluded its hearings.

"The commission does not intend to hear Bruce because in his interview with commission counsel he refused to answer several key questions. The commission will not permit him to pick and choose the questions he will answer, however, there is substantially nothing in his statement to counsel that the commission does not already know.

"The commission hopes to have its report in the hands of the commissioner of penitentiaries within one month to six weeks."

Rowan refused to identify the areas on which Bruce refused to answer questions and said he could not elaborate on the statement.

Bruce's lawyer, Terry Robertson, was not available for comment.

Death Vans Blasted After Tests

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three step-in type vans used by the Post Office were tested by professional drivers Thursday as an inquiry board began investigation of the deaths recently of three drivers within three weeks, board chairman Joe Farley of Ottawa said.

Farley, the Post Office director of safety, health and welfare, said the results of the tests will be analysed by experts before a decision is made regarding the safety of the vans.

Corporal Gordon Corsan of the British Columbia Police College driving training section said that after more than 10 test runs Thursday, "you get the feeling while driving that you are sitting alone on a stool in a large auditorium and there is an earthquake — in other words you don't know which way the vehicle is going to go when it is pushed beyond its capabilities."

Corporal Corsan and Stuart Richardson of the Professional Drivers' School and the B.C. Safety Council tested the vehicles while the nine-member inquiry committee watched.

The inquiry followed a demand from the Letter Carriers' Union for an independent probe into the reason behind the three fatal accidents, all of them in the Lower Mainaldn area.

TEAM SETS HEARINGS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The commission remapping British Columbia's provincial constituencies has set plans for a province-wide tour later this fall.

The three-member commission set tentative dates for public hearings in 30 communities between Sept. 9 and Oct. 16. It said it would release a full itinerary next week.

The commission is to recommend no fewer than the current 55 legislature seats, nor more than 62, to consider the future of two-member ridings in areas of dense population, and to recommend any changes by Oct. 31.

Breakdown Cited in Death

VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Thursday that the death of prisoner Andrew Hein was natural although hastened by a breakdown in jail procedures.

The jury found that Hein, 59, of Vancouver, died of bronchial pneumonia at Vancouver General Hospital on July 3.

Hein was arrested June 18 and charged with attempted murder of his wife. He was in custody until his death.

The coroner's jury ruled Hein's death was hastened by:

—Hein's poor health;

—Lack of adequate medical facilities at the Vancouver Provincial court building;

—Communication breakdowns between the city jail and the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre, where Hein also had been held, and individuals at those institutions.

The jury made seven recommendations which the six jurors said they believed would "improve the general processing of prisoners."

Recommendations included adding questions to the arrest sheets to determine if a new prisoner was under a doctor's care or taking medicine, preparing written instructions on any required medical procedure and providing medical staff and facilities at the downtown jail.

The jury also recommended changes aimed at a faster and tighter jailing procedure.

Earlier Thursday, the jury was told that the efficiency of the city's provincial court administration is being hampered by government policy against hiring new employees.

The assistant court administrator, Don Stewart, told the jury that a special remand order for Hein was made out incorrectly and checked by inexperienced people in his department.

3 FIREMEN HURT

VANCOUVER (CP)—Three city firemen were injured in a fire that destroyed a two-storey building in the Kitsilano area. None of the injuries were believed serious. The fire apparently broke out after an explosion in a cleaning plant.

Labor Peace 'Key' To Flow of Grain

VANCOUVER (CP) — Improvement of labor relations in the Port of Vancouver could produce an annual increase of about 27 per cent in grain throughput, according to a report released Thursday.

The report, prepared for the Western Transportation Advisory Council by the Management Services Division of British Columbia Research and the Trade Union Research Bureau, concludes that practical throughput could reach 374 million bushels a year compared with an average of 318 million bushels over the last three years due to work stoppages.

It says the theoretical maximum throughput of Vancouver elevators is 540 million bushels for a 250-day year and 766 million bushels for a 350-day year.

However, under present conditions, the practical throughput is estimated at 378 million bushels for a 250-day year and 529 million bushels for a 350-day year if no allowance is made for time loss due to strikes and lockouts.

"THE ROLLERS" are UNHOLY . . .

Reporter Fired by Paper In Leaked-Memo Squabble

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Phil Ballard, chairman of the Columbian unit of the Vancouver - New Westminster Newspaper Guild, says that Clive Mostyn has been fired as a reporter with The Columbian.

Mostyn, dismissed Tuesday, was accused of making public a memo to staff about possible staff cutbacks or postponements of pay increases at the evening newspaper if company revenues did not improve.

Ballard said a grievance was filed Wednesday by the guild on behalf of Mostyn. He said the reporter has not admitted releasing the memo. He said the Guild will "definitely be involved in an arbitration" on the matter.

The memo, signed by R. D. Taylor, publisher of The Columbian, was circulated to the 200 newspaper employees and later quoted in a story carried by the Canadian Press, the co-operative wire service agency of which The Columbian is a member.

Ballard said the staff does not feel dismissal was warranted. "The people feel he should be reprimanded . . . but I don't think the majority feel he should have been fired."

Ballard also said that with the memo being given 200 employees, "it can't be a very confidential thing."

Bert Harbottle, vice-president of The Columbian Co. Ltd., said in an interview Thursday that the company felt the matter was an internal one and he had no comment at this time.

The more you know about whisky, The better for OFC 8-Year Old.

In between 2 and 12 years, at one point in aging, like everything else in life, Canadian whisky reaches "The Prime of Life": golden, mellow, smooth and full bodied.

In our opinion, 8 years old is "Prime."

That's why OFC 8-Year Old is 8 years old. And only 8 years old.

You can drink younger whisky or older whisky but you can't drink finer whisky than OFC 8-Year Old.

Its taste is so smooth it takes no getting used to.

Datsun B-210 Hatchback

WE PUT A LITTLE "Z" SPIRIT INTO EVERY CAR WE BUILD.

Take the Datsun B210, for instance. Like all Datsuns it's got spirit you can feel. Spirit that starts with driving pleasure and smart styling and carries right on through to the low sticker price and high gas mileage.

The same engineering expertise that built the Datsun "Z" goes into every B210 we make. It's there in the snug, reclining bucket seats, and functional dash. And you can feel it in the sure-footed stopping of the power-assisted front disc brakes, and the smooth performance of the B210's synchromesh four-on-the floor or optional 3-speed automatic.

But best of all, the B210 has the Datsun spirit of economy, the typically high gas mileage of all Datsuns. In fact, no other car in Canada gets better gas mileage than a B210. It's proved in U.S. EPA tests, and you can prove it for yourself on the open road.

So feel the Datsun Spirit. Test-drive a B210 at your Datsun dealers' today.

Dale Shaw Banking on Par to Take Crown

OAKFIELD, N.S. (CP) — Dale Shaw still thinks that by matching par the rest of the field will have to chase her to the finish of the Canadian women's amateur while defending champion Debbie Massey says it will take below-par scoring today and Saturday to win.

Miss Shaw, a 28-year-old Calgary native who now lives in Victoria, led the field after 36 holes of the championship Thursday with a one-under 147 on rounds of 73 Wednesday and even-par 74 in the second round.

"They've got to catch me," she said after Thursday's round in which she matched par on each hole.

Miss Massey, a 24-year-old ski instructor, had a one-over-par 75 Thursday and fell a stroke behind the leader.

Third place was held by Susie Conklin of Lachute, Que., who stormed out of the field with a three-under-par 71, matching the course record for women. She trailed the leader by five strokes with a 152 total that included a "terrible" opening round 81.

"I just can't believe it," the 28-year-old sometime swimming instructor said. "I've never been that low before.

Miss Conklin said she got a pep talk Wednesday night from her father and a tip from Oakfield professional Boyd Brooks and that helped her round Thursday.

She credited Brooks with correcting a fault in her putting stroke and "I changed my grip today to a baseball-type from the overlapping."

Miss Shaw had another reason to be happy following British Columbia's win in the inter-provincial teams competition.

"That's one down," she said after the B.C. Foursome finished with a 15-stroke edge over a charging Quebec squad led by Louise Larochelle of Cap Rouge.

Miss Shaw led the B.C. team with the pair of scores that give her the individual lead while Florence McFall of Richmond, with a 74 Thursday, and Marilyn Palmer and Valerie White, both of Vancouver, had 77s.

The foursome led from the start, totalling 229 Wednesday and 225 Thursday for a 454 total. It was B.C.'s ninth team title since the event began in 1947.

Pete and Howard Show A Salute to Seahawks

SEATTLE — When National Football League commissioner Pete Rozelle was introduced at a media conference prior to a "Salute to the Seahawks" luncheon at the Seattle Centre Exhibition Hall, Tuesday, he quipped: "Anything that Howard (Cosell) leaves unanswered, I'll be glad to try." And if Rozelle and Cosell, between them, eventually said everything there was to say about football, they didn't say much that wasn't already known. The Pete and Howard show had hit the coast and they had a virgin audience.

The Seahawks of course, are the newest pro team in north-west sports, open play in the NFL in the fall of 1976, and will perform in Seattle's new, multi-purpose stadium, the Kingdome, which is scheduled to open in March. And even if the team doesn't yet have a coach, or a player, 1,800 luncheon guests paid $10 each for the privilege of welcoming the commissioner and his literate mouthpiece to town.

And soon all were to know that, if anything is certain, it's that the Seahawks aren't going to have an instant winner and just how they will be stocked hasn't been determined either.

Rozelle explained that each existing NFL club will probably be able to freeze at least 29 of their veteran players in the expansion draft. If this didn't sound too encouraging, Rozelle suggested that simply by the weight of numbers of the teams in the NFL this should give the new teams in the NFL a suitable nucleus. Tampa is the other. Then he tempered the blow further by saying there may be "preferential treatment" allowed in the U.S. college draft with perhaps earlier and extra choices. He explained that this, however, couldn't come about until a league meeting acted on the matter in January and further, any changes had to be approved by 20 of the 26 owners.

★ ★ ★

"I hope whatever plan we come up with will enable the new teams to be as competitive as possible as soon as possible," he said, he then added that the new league alignment wouldn't be known until October and even then that decision might not be permanent.

So if he told the luncheon guests everything, they learned nothing. Which is probably why he is commissioner.

Cosell, to be expected, was more blunt. He said the Seahawk owners shouldn't expect the world in the first season and didn't deserve it either. "They knew exactly what they were getting for their $16 million, when they bought into this league," he said. Like any other business, they will have to work at it, develop their own stars, their own management and scouting systems and should take heart from the fact that really it doesn't take too long to turn a team around in this fiercely-competitive age.

He noted, as an example, that Jim Thomas had done almost a complete hatchet job at Baltimore, once one of the top NFL teams, but lately an also-ran. He explained that nearly everyone from the top down had been turfed out and predicted that the Baltimore rebuilding plan was about to produce results and cautioned football fans to "watch the Colts". The NFL's chief flak was in high gear.

Cosell praised Rozelle as a curious, compromise choice when he was named NFL commissioner in 1960. "He is a quiet sophisticated person with deep vision," he said; "and, faced with soaring salaries, rising stadium rents and other economic problems, he is the guy who put it all together in the NFL.

"He runs them, they don't run him," he said of Rozelle's association with the owners.

★ ★ ★

In a rare moment of praise, Cosell complimented the luncheon turnout as "simply fantastic . . . an intense football interest . . . and the largest crowd I have seen at a football-type function and this includes the places where everybody turns out for Monday night football." His ego message was complete.

Rozelle later chided the football faithful about the name they had chosen, "Seahawks," and therein lies a tale.

"I understand it poses a problem," he said. And maybe it does, for a Sea Hawk is a Fish Hawk, which is an Osprey, which is a large diurnal raptorial bird coloured brown above and gleaming white below. It subsists on fish and washes its feet by flying along and dragging them through the water. But it is also famous for laying big, brightly-colored eggs.

Rozelle then recalled the problem Atlanta experienced when it entered the NFL. They had two falcons which were to circle the field among other fanfare, but somebody got worried that in all the excitement maybe the falcons wouldn't do what they were supposed to. So, in a precautionary move, they were given sedatives.

To make a long story short, one toppled off his perch and had to be put back. When it came the turn of the other falcon to do his trick, he took off, and promptly crashed to the deck. The next time, the strength of the sedative was lessened, but the result was more or less the same.

If Rozelle was anticipating a similar problem with a Seahawk, he also had a possible answer on how to avert what a Seahawk does best.

"I suggest you give yours a Tums," he said.

Better Return on Hair Than Old Beer Bottles

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

If you had a chance to tour South America, you would probably do almost anything to raise the money necessary to go.

University of Victoria Vikings, who left this afternoon on a six-game rugby tour of Argentina and Uruguay raised $16,000 during the last school year in some pretty novel ways.

Seven of the 26 players making the trip took pledges to shave their heads and raised about $1,000.

The team also took pledges to donate their blood and gave more than 100 pints. That brought in another $700.

There was also the usual assortment of raffles, collections, dances and bottle drives.

Rugby players are supposed to be without equal in the consumption of beer, but a beer bottle drive netted the Vikings only $3.49. The explanation from treasurer Bill Gordon was that there was little advance planning for the drive, which took place at 9 a.m. on a Saturday.

The team made up for it last weekend by collecting the empties after a rugby tournament which Vikings won in Kelowna. They got 20 dozen bottles.

As far as playing coach Alan Rees knows, this marks the first time a Canadian rugby team has toured South America and he's quick to point out that the team is aware of its responsibilities as national representatives.

"Two years ago we decided that if we had the talent, we'd try to organize a tour," he explained. The talent developed and the players voted in favor of South America.

Rees and manager Howard Gerwing arranged the trip, lining up games against district clubs in Buenos Aires and national teams in Montevideo.

They play the first of three matches in Buenos Aires next Wednesay against Belgrano, followed by games Aug. 13 against San Isidro and Aug. 19 against Sanitarias Obras. Montevideo matches are Aug. 22 against Uruguay's national "A" side and Aug. 25 against the Uruguay national "B" team.

Another game has been arranged in Buenos Aires Aug. 29 against an undetermined opponent. The team returns Aug. 31.

Rees, Gerwing, Gordon and equipment manager Mark Bell are among the official party making the trip.

Players going are team captain and flanker Ken Wilke, props Don McRae, Goodie Goodmanseth, John Buchanan and John Sheridan; hookers Peter Reinholdt and Tom Bateau, locks Steve Thompson, Bob Strachan and Dave Lloyd; No. 8 Bobby Carson; flankers Ken McRae, Dave Chambers and Bill Walker; scrum halves Brent Johnson and John Norris; fly halves Peter Kilshaw and Rees; centres James Wenman, Doug Archibald, Mike Blades and Allister Palmer; wings Yehudi Prior, Bob Wright and Ed Polson and fullback Rick Couch.

Unfamiliar Faces Among the Leaders

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Four sophomore Mark Hayes mastered Firestone with a three-under-par 67 and led the advance of golf's more unfamiliar faces in Thursday's first round of the 57th PGA National championship.

Bob Benson, Fred Wampler and Ed Dougherty all were among the leaders in the event while, in a direct reversal, Johnny Miller played so poorly he was thinking of going home, Jack Nicklaus admitted to frustration and Tom Weiskopf nearly shot himself out of it.

Hayes, who still faces the trauma of the qualifying rounds in order to gain a spot in regular tour events, birdied three of four holes at one stretch in his pace-setting effort.

One stroke back at 68 were Benson and Larry Hinson, a 31-year-old tour regular.

Sandra Hobbles To Tie

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Sandra Palmer, one shoe on and one shoe off, hobbled along the fairways of Sunningdale and tied Donna Caponi Young for first place at the halfway stage in the 72-hole European women's open golf championship Thursday.

Miss Palmer 34, had a painful blister on her right heel but still shot a five-under-par 69 for a two-round total of 139.

Mrs. Young, 30, the first-round leader with a 68, slipped to a 71 in the second round.

JoAnne Carner was four strokes back in third with 143. All three leaders are from the United States and, like most of the competitors here, are regulars on the Ladies' Professional Golf Association tour.

Sandra Post, the Oakville, Ont., native now living in Florida, fired a 75 for 149 and was tied for 21st place. Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., whose 72 Wednesday left her in a challenging position in the 72-hole tournament, soared to a 78 and stood at 150.

Canada Bars S. Africa

TORONTO (CP) — Canada has withdrawn its invitation to South African sportsmen to compete in the world Masters athletic competition the eve of the event rather than face a showdown with the federal government.

Don Farquarson, president of the Over 40 World Masters Committee, said Thursday he was forced to take the last-minute stand after the foreign minister's office refused to subsidize the world meet, which gets under way Monday, if South African entries were allowed to compete.

He said he was aware of the situation in May but was encouraged up to the end that the situation would change, allowing the South African team — currently competing in the U.S. Masters at White Plains, N.Y. — to compete here.

Ontario Near Title

CALGARY (CP) — Ontario assured itself of at least a tie with Alberta for first place in the Canadian Cricket Championships Thursday by defeating Saskatchewan by seven wickets.

The Ontario team scored 142 for the loss of three wickets compared with its competitors' total of 140.

The final outcome will be decided today when Ontario meets Alberta. A win or a draw will give Ontario the championship but a win by Alberta will create a two-way tie.

Alberta moved into championship contention by defeating Nova Scotia by six wickets. After dismissing Nova Scotia for 129 Alberta replied with 130 for four.

British Columbia lost its chance of claiming the national title by being held to a draw by Manitoba. After dismissing B.C. for 143, Manitoba fell four runs short of victory when play ended with the priairie team at 140 for eight.

Ashmore Given Top Refs' Rating

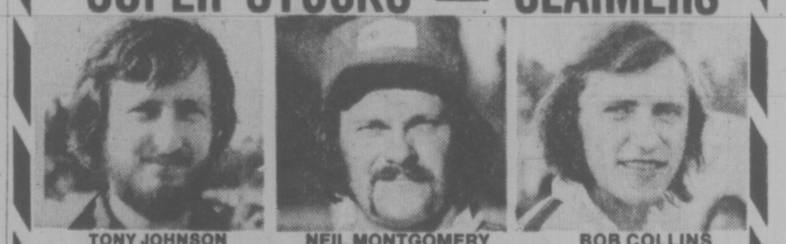
Ed Ashmore of Victoria, coach of a Canadian junior wrestling team that left today for a U.S. tour and pre-Olympic meet in Montreal starting Aug. 18, has obtained certification as a category one referee.

Fewer than 10 Canadians have category one certificates. Ashmore, who coaches wrestling at S. J. Willis Junior High School as well as with his own club in Victoria, is eligible to referee amateur wrestling matches anywhere in the world and could be a referee at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

He has already been appointed as a wrestling official for the Montreal games.

Ashmore returned to Victoria this week after a month of travel to meets and training camps.

Included was a stop at Santo Domingo where one of Ashmore's wrestlers, 15-year-old Rolf Schetterer of Victoria, placed fourth in the world schoolboy championships.



DERBY HINTS

Check Gear, Fish Tides, Pray a Lot

Unless the weather turns nasty enough to spoil the fun, sports fishermen — the good, the bad and the indifferent — will float or chug boat-to-boat in some British Columbia waters this weekend in efforts to catch a salmon worth $25,000.

To most of them, Saturday and Sunday will be B.C. Derby time. To the sponsors, the event is the Export A world salmon championships.

Whatever the name, the competition offers $75,000 in prizes and it is expected that between 8,000 and 10,000 anglers will pursue salmon in three widley-separated areas — Howe Sound, Pender Harbor and Cowichan Bay.

The heaviest salmon weighed in during the two days will be worth $25,000. In addition, another $25,000 will go as a hidden-weight prize to the derby contestant who enters the salmon that exactly matches a secret, pre-determined weight between 15 and 20 pounds.

Luck may have a hand in determining the big winners, but some knowledge may help improve your chances.

With the help of several of the Island's acknowledged experts, here are some hints that may help you into the prizes:

First of all, check your gear. Get rid of frayed line or leader. Constantly check the leader, especially after you've had a bite.

Fish the good tides.

Pete Lambert, operator of Cowichan's Anchor Marina and the official derby weigh-master, says moochers always have found just before high tide as one of their favorite times.

"Ideally, you fish the hour before high tide, and then through the change. The same seems to apply if you're trolling at Sansum Narrows," says Pete.

And if you're one of those who puts a great deal of faith in solunar tables, don't go taking off at lunch hour. Our Coble's Calendar (see below) indicates the ideal time Saturday is 1:02 p.m. and on Sunday at 1:55 p.m.

But don't ignore the early-morning bite. The big chinooks around the Narrows and in Cowichan Bay are spawners ... hungriest, the experts say, at the first sign of light.

For the moochers, there really isn't much of a choice. Herring. For trollers, the variety of lure to use is great. Undoubtedly, herring strip will be one of the most popular.

From Tommy Davis comes the tip to try a seven-inch herring in a Super herring-teaser.

At the Narrows as well as at Separation Point, plugs have also been producing ... pink and white, generally.

If all else fails, you can try Bill Eastgate's strategy: "Pray a lot."

You don't need prayers to make sure you know the derby rules before you start, or that derby closing times are 9 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday, with no fishing between 9 p.m. Saturday and "first light of day" Sunday.

At Cowichan Bay, no derby fishing will be permitted in waters close to the river mouth. In the bay, the derby boundary is a line from Wilcuma wharf to a marker on the bluff, southeast of Genoa Bay. On the north, the boundary is a line across Sansum Narrows from Arbutus Point to Maxwell Point on Saltspring Island. On the south, the boundary is a line from Hatch Point to Cape Keppel.

Big chinooks are late in arriving at Cowichan Bay this year, but fishing appears to have picked up a bit in the past few days with moochers outfishing the trollers by a slight margin.

Among the catches were a bright, 35:11-pound chinook — bigger than any prize-winning fish in B.C. Derby history — that was landed Wednesday by Bob Patterson and of salmon 22 pounds (Tuesday) and 27:08 pounds (Wednesday) by Los Angeles hockey coach Bob Pulford.

Elsewhere, the best chances of landing a whopper over the weekend could be in waters off Oak Bay and Victoria, where a few coho are now showing.

One of the hottest spots has been off the Oak Bay golf links between the Chain Islands and Trial Island. Harry Southin came in with chinooks of 16 and 20 pounds taken off Trial Thursday morning after hauling in a 27:08-pounder in the same area Wednesday.

Also taken off Oak Bay during Wednesday's streak of fast fishing were Bob Partington's 24-pounder, and a 23:08-pounder, along with a tackle-testing 47:05-pounder hooked off the breakwater on a home-made lure.

* * *

Some big coho are occasionally hitting lures in the Becher Bay area, from which silvers of up to 15 pounds have been weighed in at Cheanuh Marina.

Using only eight ounces of weight, King Smith landed a 16-pound chinook at Becher Thursday and Eugene Tiefenbach found the salmon in the same area Wednesday, boating chinooks of 23, 15 and 12 pounds along with a coho.

Fishing in those waters has not been spectacular, but there are some big ones around, like the 34-pounder taken last Sunday by Billie Kaye.

* * *

Where it has been spectacular is Rivers Inlet, to where Claude Lacerte, captain of the charter-boat Marabelle, brought his 16-year-old nephew, Sylvain Bellmare, out from Trois Rivieres, Que., to show him what B.C. salmon fishing can be like. Wednesday evening, in the Hakai pass area of the inlet, the youngster had the thrill of a lifetime. He went out fishing alone and, using cut-plug herring, landed a 76-pounder.

VANCOUVER (CP) — With Joe Gronotte hurling a four-hitter and scoring the winning run in the last of the fifth inning, Vancouver Dunbar won the provincial Little League baseball title Thursday night with a 4-3 win over Coquitlam.

BOBBY ORR
... $10 million man?

Sinden Mum On Orr

BOSTON (AP) — Managing director Harry Sinden of Boston Bruins declined comment Thursday on a lawyer's proposal that the team will have to spend $10 million to prevent Bobby Orr from jumping to the World Hockey Association in 1976.

"We just can't comment on reports like that," Sinden said. "We haven't talked money with Orr or his attorney yet and we're not going to negotiate in the media. We think negotiations should be carried on in a first-class manner and in private."

Orr's lawyer, Alan Eagleson, said in Toronto he does not care whether the Bruins, a National Hockey League team, pay Orr $5 million a year on a two-year contract, $2 million a season for a five-year contract, or $250,000 a year for the next 40 years.

"I want to make sure Bobby is set for life when he signs his next contract," Eagleson said.

If Mike Schmidt had his way, he'd probably take back what he said last winter about Chicago Cubs.

The Philadelphia Phillies third baseman classified the Cubs as second-class citizens in baseball's National League East Division and Chicago has made the Phillies pay for it this summer.

"Schmidt's remark rubbed us the wrong way," said Rick Reuschel after pitching the Cubs to a 5-3 victory over the Phillies Thursday night. "Last winter Schmidt said that for the Phillies to win the division, they had to beat teams like the Cubs.

"I don't think Philadelphia is that much better that they can classify us that way. It gave us a little extra incentive against these guys."

The victory was Chicago's eighth in 12 games with the Phillies and prevented them from gainingg round on the East-leading Pittsburgh Pirates. The Pirates were beaten 6-1 by Houston Astros and maintained a four-game edge in baseball's most competitive race.

In the only other National League game, New York Mets blanked the Montreal Expos 7-0.

In Thursday's American League action, Baltimore Orioles ran Detroit Tigers' losing streak to 12 with a 7-6 decision, Boston Red Sox defeated Milwaukee Brewers 4-2, New York Yankees beat Cleveland Indians 6-3, Oakland Athletics trimmed Texas Rangers 10-1, Kansas City Royals dumped Minnesota Twins 10-2 and Chicago White Sox beat California Angels 8-4.

Lions Will Keep Keys For Rest of Season

VANCOUVER (CP) — The board of directors of the British Columbia Lions says it has decided to retain head coach Eagle Keys for the balance of the Canadian Football League ssason.

Club president Bill McEwen said that "the topic of firing the coach has not come up at any time."

It had been reported Tuesday on a radio station that Keys would be fired, along with general manager Jackie Parker, if the Lions lost to Calgary Stampeders that night. Calgary won the game, played here, 28-13.

"Our discussion (at the regular monthly meeting Wednesday) revolved around the incorrect radio story and about the disruptive influence it had on the team," said McEwen. "We talked about what we could do about it, what we could do to help the team.

"This board looks on Eagle Keys and his coaches to coach this season in its entirety and we want that on the record."

The Lions have lost their first three league games after going undefeated in four exhibition games. Crowds at Empire Stadium are down from 1974, with only 18,167 at the game Tuesday.

Lions placed import defensive halfback Mike Brunson, cut this week by St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League, on a five-day tryout Thursday.

Brunson, 28, is six feet and weighs 190 pounds. He played with Atlanta Falcons for three seasons, spent a year with Houston Oilers and was used as a wide receiver by the Cardinals in 1974.

Surprise Among Mac Trio Named to Boxla All-Stars

Three Victoria Mcdonalds, two obvious choices and one surprise selection, were named Thursday to the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League all-star team.

The obvious picks were defenceman Norm Baker and Kevin Alexander. Baker has well over 100 points while Alexander is two points shy of setting a single-season scoring record in Canadian Junior "A" lacrosse. He has 204 points.

Besides being the only unanimous selection, Alexander was selected the league's most valuable player.

The surprise was Steve Hepburn, a rookie with the team who missed 17 games earlier because of a broken jaw.

Top rookie was Eric Otterstron of Coquitlam J-Hawks.

Others named to the all-star team were goalie John Lewis of Richmond and Burnaby wingers Kelly McLenaghen and Dan Perrault.

Selected to the second team were goalie Rich Zecchel of Burnaby, defencemen Matt Aitken of Burnaby and Jim Curley of New Westminster, centre Gary Holte and winger Jack Fulton, both of New Westminster, and winger Rico Bellusci of Richmond.

The best-of-seven semi-final between Victoria and Richmond will open next Thursday at Esquimalt Sports Centre and continue in Richmond Aug. 16.

BATES BOAST STARRY STATS

Victoria Bate will open defence of its B.C. Senior "A" Men's fastball championship Saturday in Vancouver with an impressive set of credentials.

Bate is tied with clubmates Reg Underwood for the runs lead at 19 and Mike Taaffe for the doubles lead with five.

Victoria's pitching statistics are equally impressive as club hurlers lead in every category but strikeouts.

Stan Kern, who will miss the provincial playoffs because of a bad back, tops the league with a 0.78 earned-run average and five shutouts.

Kern's pitching mate, Dave Ruthowsky, leads the league with 15 victories and the most innings pitched, 148.

George Had Answer to Beer Shortage

The resourceful Capt. George Vancouver had an answer to British Columbia's beer shortage.

When he and his men were around these parts they made their own, using spruce trees as their main source of supply.

They'd boil 10 gallons of water to which was added six pounds of molasses and three ounces of bruised ginger for 30 minutes. Then two pounds of the outer sprigs of spruce trees were added and boiled for five minutes.

Then it was strained, put in a cask when milk-warm, a teacup of yeast being stirred into it. After a day or two of fermentation, the cask was bunged up, the contents being bottled the next day. The beer was fit for drinkong in a week.

Spruce beer was said to have staved off scurvy ... and it probably did wonders for cases of homesickness.

In case you're wondering, this recipe wasn't gleaned through a medium pipeline to Vancouver's shade but it is one of more than 3,000 items contained in one of the most comprehensive atlases I've seen.

Produced by Steve and Linda Hilson, it's titled Exploratory, Puget Sound, British Columbia, and is now being sold in Victoria.

Steve is a former talent agent. He and his wife took off for 2½ years, exploring the waters from Los Angeles to southeast Alaska.

There's $35 worth of U.S. and Canadian charts in the atlas, each page filled with historical data, gleaned from the University of Washington's library. The Gulf Islands and other local waters are amply covered and there's also a wealth of information on where to fish, scuba dive and get supplies and service.

Sailors I've talked to here and in Vancouver on the weekend are enthusiastic about the Hilson's product. It should become preferred reading on many local boats once the word geta around.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club has been conducting summer classes for many years but I'll eat our spinnaker if this year's aren't the highest in standard ever.

Bruce Fleming Smith is head instructor and along with Jennifer Charlesworth and Al McGillivary, are turning out a new breed of pretty knowledgable "rag-haulers," using Canadian Yachting Association standards.

Three sessions will be held before the season ends with 138 juniors learning the gamut from basic sailing techniques to tuning skills and racing with spinnakers.

The club has bought eight new Flying Juniors for the program, each equipped with spinnaker. Little time as possible is spent in classroom work, two-thirds of the three-week sessions being held where the action is — on the water.

A new session began this week and if it's anything like the last one it's guaranteed to be an outstanding success. Twenty-two of the basic class students graduated and 24 in the intermediate section, Bruce McGregor topping the class by earning his bronze level V, CYA.

The club will be holding another of its Wednesday night series racing this coming week. Start time is 6:30 p.m.

Kershaw, Price in Field For Roy White Memorial

Rumors that Gary Kershaw and Bill Price are foresaking local superstock competition in favor of open stock car racing have been spiked with confirmation that both drivers will be in action Saturday at Western Speedway.

Both missed the last two superstock shows, leaving the larger engines in their cars for open events. But they'll be in Saturday's lineup when the superstocks and claimers take over at Western.

The feature is the 65-lap Roy White Memorial race, worth double points, and Kershaw and Price both need a win to get back into the thick of the driver point scramble.

Tony Johnson currently leads with 827 points and Kershaw is a distant fourth with 560. Price is seventh with 422.

Al Wade, who won the White Memorial last year, won't be around this time. He's been out of action since wrecking his 1963 Plymouth June 21.

Kershaw and Price are passing up a couple of open races this weekend. There's one at Langley Saturday night worth $1,000 to the winner followed by Sunday's $10,000 NASCAR race at Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Wash. Victoria drivers Roy Haslam, Rick O'Dell and Ross Surgenor plan to compete along with George Stuart of Campbell River, who has his car back together after last Saturday's crash with Don Harper in the Billy Foster Memorial at Western.

The super modified open-wheel cars move into Western next Tuesday for the third stop in the six-race International Drivers' Challenge series. Defending champion is Victoria's Roy Smith and he'll drive the entire series. It starts Saturday at Tacoma Spanaway and continues Sunday at Olympia Tenino, Tuesday at Western, Friday on the dirt at Sky Valley near Monroe, Saturday on the dirt at Skagit near Mt. Vernon, Wash., and Sunday back at Spanaway.

Saturday's program at Western, meanwhile, begins with time trails at 7 p.m. followed by racing at 8.

UNIONS HELP BAIL OUT N. YORK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two municipal unions have agreed to throw the weight of their hefty pension funds behind municipal assistance corporation bonds, virtually assuring that New York City would not have to default on its August loan obligations.

Trusfees of the police and fire department pension systems agreed to buy $40 million worth of corporations bonds. Thus, the corporation probably will be able to complete its complex $1-billion financing package.

The heaviest of the city's obligations falls due on Aug. 22, when $791.7 million in principal and interest must be redeemed.

"We think the pieces are all there," corporation executive director Herbert Elish said. "we're convinced the total package is coming together."

On Wednesday, two of the city's five pension funds, the New York City Retirement Fund and the Teachers' Retirement Fund, agreed to buy a total of $125 million worth of the bonds.

Patrolmen's Benevolent Association President Ken McFeeley said the policemen's retirement system had agreed to invest $30 million in the corporation's bonds and the firemen's retirement system $10 million.

State comptroller Arthur Levitt is expected to decide early next week whether to commit a small portion of the $6.3-billion state pension system to the purchase of the corporation's bonds.

Jailer's Sex Talk Quoted

RALEIGH (AP)—The sexual behavior of a slain North Carolina jailer has for the first time been made the focal point of the Joan Little murder trial as three former prisoners testified he had made sexual advances to them or to Miss Little.

The three women, all black like Miss Little, said Thursday the white Beaufort County jailer, Clarence Alligood, had made sexually suggestive remarks.

Alligood was found stabbed to death in the jail cell from which Miss Little had fled last Aug. 27. He was naked from the waist down and there was semen on his thigh.

Miss Little, 21, said she stabbed Alligood with an ice pick to stop a sexual attack. The prosecution claims she killed him to escape.

Phyllis Ann Moore, 19, who was confined with Miss Little, said Alligood twice made sexually suggestive remarks to Miss Little within a five-day period when he came to the cell block to serve breakfast.

Annie Marie Gardner, 26, said Alligood, 62, fondled her breast in the jail during her 44-day sentence. Rosa Ida Mae Roberson, in the jail 21 days, said Alligood "bothered" her so much about sex that she tried to slash her wrists.

Mrs. Roberson said she had also tried to kill herself as she was being taken to jail after she was convicted of making threatening telephone calls. She said that was before she met Alligood.

Both Mrs. Roberson and Miss Gardner were released before Miss Little was a prisoner.

All three women testified that Alligood was the only jailer who entered the women's cell block and the only prison employee who made sexual advances.

Mrs. Moore said Alligood talked to Miss Little when he came to the women's section of the jail. "I heard him ask her if she missed her man," she said. Miss Little only turned away, Mrs. Moore testified.

Smog Now Plagues Country Districts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Smog is now plaguing rural areas as well as big cities, and it may be necessary to impose pollution controls in small towns, says the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Citing a new report, the agency said Thursday smog harmful to health is much more widespread than previously thought, with the nation's big cities acting like giant smokestacks spewing clouds of pollution that drift perhaps hundreds of miles into the countryside.

The initial measurements were made in rural areas of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Maryland, the EPA said, with additional readings being taken this summer in other parts of the country. But already, it said, it is clear that smog, primarily from cars, is more than just an urban problem.

"Continued emphasis on intensive control measures within cities will be necessary to meet the oxidant standard in major urban areas," the report said.

That conclusion, buttressed by another study summarizing the medical effects of air pollution, comes at a time when the EPA's clean air standards and some of its proposals for meeting them are under attack.

Congress is considering a number of amendments to the Clean Air Act of 1970, all of which would weaken it, an EPA spokesman said. At the same time, the energy crisis and the recession have combined to overshadow environmental concerns, particularly if there appears to be a conflict.

Nationally, there is a downward trend in hydrocarbon emissions, the automobile exhaust chemicals that react with sunlight to form smog.

However, Train said, "the expected increase in the number of vehicles, in vehicle travel and in stationary sources (smokestacks) ... threatens to outweigh the gains we are making ... tighter controls on many sources are essential."

Among the controls that the EPA has taken or announced are tighter emission standards for passenger car exhausts; tougher standards for heavy-duty vehicles (trucks); standards for motorcycles; controls requiring the recovery of vapors from gasoline; encouragement of strong state inspection and maintenance programs for automobiles; and the establishment of standards for new hydrocarbon-emitting facilities.

U.S. Tax Men Reveal Tactics Of Investigation

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Donald Alexander, commissioner for the U.S. Internal Revenue Service, said Thursday the agency once had a school for IRS agents which taught them how to pick locks and wiretap telephones of tax evaders.

Alexander told a House of Representatives committee investigating U.S. intelligence operations that the school ended in 1965 and that no IRS agents are now authorized to use wiretaps.

Hurdler Attacks Olympic Politics

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — An incident similar to the murder of most of the Israeli team by Arab terrorists at the 1972 Olympic Games at Munich could occur next year at Montreal unless less emphasis is put on the political aspect of the Games, says hurdler Ralph Mann.

Mann, 26, world record holder in the 400-metre and 440-yard hurdles and a silver medallist in 1972, said terrorism is another form of the political action which has made the Olympics a burden for athletes.

"The athletes are there for purpose of competing, but it's difficult to perform well with the political environment on the outside," he said in an interview.

He said most athletes would have backed the late distance runner Steve Prefontaine when he said, "the hell with competing for my country."

"All Prefontaine was saying is it was my sacrifice, not yours," Mann said. "It was my will, not yours. I need your help, yet you turn your back. Now all of a sudden you're willing to sit back and associate my medal with my country."

If he could go to the Olympics knowing he had the best coach, financial assistance and resources behind him, Mann said, "then I may be willing to give some credit to my country. But I'm out to win for myself, not my country."

Vietnam Bloodbath Fears a Wash Out

WASHINGTON (WP) — The first 100 days of Communist rule of South Vietnam has provided no hard evidence of the "bloodbath" that had been predicted by American officials and others.

The state department, senate refugee subcommittee and news correspondents agree that there has been no indication of anything resembling a massacre by the victorious North Vietnamese.

The spectre of "half a million" being killed "if the Communists were to take over" was raised by former president Nixon in justifying continued American presence in South Vietnam.

Former president Johnson also raised the bloodbath possibility, but not to the extent Nixon and other officials in his administration did.

Chairman Edward Kennedy of the senate refugee subcommittee is among those who argued that the Nixon administration's bloodbath warnings delayed American withdrawal from Vietnam and triggered the exodus of South Vietnamese to refugee camps.

"I'm convinced the bloodbath rhetoric delayed our withdrawal," Kennedy said in an interview. "I never believed it. But the bloodbath scare talk resulted in a much greater number of South Vietnamese leaving their country than would have done so otherwise."

The Senate also criticized the Ford administration for rejecting pleas he and other lawmakers made to seek advance assurance of good treatment of South Vietnamese from Hanoi's leaders.

As North Vietnamese forces were rolling south, Kennedy said, he urged obtaining the kind of assurances for civilians that were issued in the Nigerian and Algerian civil wars.

"Habib told me such assurances from Hanoi wouldn't be worth the paper they were written on," Kennedy said.

He was referring to Philip Habib, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs. Habib lafer provided the state department's acknowledgment that "there has been no evidence of a bloodbath in South Vietnam." He told the senate refugee subcommittee last Thursday when Kennedy asked him whether "we had the bloodbath that was predicted:" "In terms of anything extensive, there is no indication at this time."

The Senate Refugee Subcommittee also has heard from Vietnam officials outside the government who have testified to no evidence of a bloodbath.

The leadership of the Catholic Church, Kennedy said, ordered its priests in South Vietnam to stay put in the event of a Communist takeover. The senator argued that the fact that Catholics had more to fear from a Communist takeover than others but still remained in South Vietnam illustrated that the bloodbath rhetoric was not believed by the church hierarchy.

Senate refugee specialists further argue that with the Catholic hierarchy intact in South Vietnam, plus the presence of third country nationals, chances are slim that massive executions by the Communists would go undetected.

Washington Post special correspondent James Fenton was in Saigon through the Communist takeover until last weekend. He said from Bangkok Monday that he heard of no massive reprisals.

Interviews with government officials who had predicted a bloodbath if the United States withdrew from South Vietnam brought responses ranging from relief to skepticism that we would find out about massive executions of South Vietnamese.

POLLUTION THREAT DENIED

Canadian Press

Mines Minister Leo Nimsick said Wednesday there is no danger of pollution from a proposed coal mine near the Flathead River, about 95 miles southeast of Fernie.

Sage Creek Coal Ltd., a subsidiary of Rio Algon Mines Ltd., plans to put the open-pit mine into production in 1979. A public hearing, attended by Canadian and United States environmental groups, was held in Fernie last week.

U.S. environmental groups have expressed concern that water used to wash the coal will be discharged into Cabin Creek, which joins the North Fork of the Flathead River and flows south across the international border into northern Montana.

Nimsick said any waste water from the mine will be recycled and if there is any discharge from the mine into Cabin Creek it will be pollution-free.

He said the mine is not scheduled for production for several years and the company must file a feasibility study as well as qualify for a production lease.

In order to qualify for a production lease under the provisions of the 1974 Coal Act, the company will have to meet certain requirements regarding environmental matters, reclamation, living conditions for employees and mining methods.

Nimsick said he feels B.C. mining regulations now are tough enough to deal with such developments.

"I think the Montana people are getting uptight about something that is ours and that we are able to handle," the minister said.

Boy Kills Self

BETHANY, Ill. (AP) — A 12-year-old boy, whose parents refused to buy him a mini-bicycle because they were afraid he would get hurt, became despondent and hanged himself, authorities said. The body was found in a barn near the family home early Thursday.

Spain Continues Crackdown On Military

MADRID (WP) — Continuing a surprising crackdown on the Spanish military for suspected anti-regime activities, military intelligence have arrested seven more officers, bringing the number of armed forces dissidents under detention in the past few days to 21, informed sources said Wednesday.

Although authorities have only disclosed the arrest of one major and seven captains, military sources said that 14 officers implicated by those detained last weekend have been picked up by military police in the last two days.

Spanish intelligence, sources said, were surprised by widespread activities of the group, which calls itself the Military Democratic Union. The union reportedly has been active in all three services — army, air force and navy.

While military authorities refused to confirm the new arrests, informed sources said that at least 300 officers would be closely interrogated by counter-intelligence army agents charged with the investigation of the union's activities, described as a "group" which drafted studies of how to reform the dictatorship of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Another 700 to 800 officers, sources added, were being investigated by the national security directorate to determine whether or not they have been guilty of illegal political activities. Security police reportedly were collaborating closely with specially picked military intelligence officers working directly under the direction of the ministers of the army, air force and navy.

Political sources expressed the belief that the military arrests were aimed at Premier Carlo Arias, whose attempts to introduce measures for the minimal liberalization of the dictatorship have been foiled by Franco.

Sources said that Franco, who is vacationing in the northwestern port city of La Coruna, was receiving daily reports of the military crackdown. The 82-year-old chief of state has kept a firm hand on the military establishment, and has made all military decisions, since he became Spain's chief of state at the end of the three-year civil war 36 years ago.

Rightist generals, mostly civil war veterans, and conservative politicians who are opposed to reforming the Franco regime, have blamed Arias for unrest among the military, outbreaks of street violence and a critical press. A former security police chief and interior minister, Arias took over as premier following the assassination of Adm. Luis Carrero Blanco at the end of 1974.

"ABC," a major Madrid newspaper, reported Wednesday morning that talk in Franco's vacation city was that the generalissimo was considering firing Arias and replacing him with a hardliner. Such reports have circulated in political circles for the past eight weeks.

Observers pointed out that Arias was in Helsinki, attending the European security summit conference, when the dissident officers were detained. Although the investigation of military dissent has been under way for months, the premier apparently was not advised of the arrests until after the officers had been detained.

Sources said that military intelligence acted to destroy what could have become the nucleus of a revolutionary armed forces movement like that which ousted the Portuguese right-wing dictatorship 15 months ago.

While government officials have tended to minimize the arrests, Western diplomats have expressed deep concern over other developments. The idea that the Spanish military was rent by dissent apparently surprised them, despite recurrent reports that officers were distressed by a promotion system favoring civil war veterans and officers considered loyal to Franco and his ideals.

Sources added that at least three generals on active duty were under investigation, but refused to disclose their names. For weeks now rumors have circulated in Madrid that the head of the paramilitary Civil Guard, Lt. Gen. Miguel Vega Rodriguez, was in serious trouble for his liberal political views.

Recently he gave a speech urging the civil guard and police "not to take the law into their own hands" but to do their duty, arrest criminal and political suspects, and let the courts do their job.

Victoria loses its weatherman on Wednesday.

That's the last working day for Allan McQuarrie, officer in charge of the Victoria weather office at the Victoria International Airport.

It ends 34½ years of service with what is now known as the federal government's Atmospheric Environment Service.

In the years he's headed the nine-man Victoria office, McQuarrie has kept his finger on the pulse of everything that happens in this area.

As he puts it, "Weather affects everything."

The thousands of phone calls answered by his office run the gamut from a forest ranger at Langford, anxious to know the projected wind direction and strength in order to decide whether to bring in water bombers to fight a fire, to an enquiry from a person planning to do some downtown shopping.

"I'll always remember one caller who wanted some pretty specific details. It was from a lady wanting to know what kind of hat to wear," McQuarrie recalls.

From April, 1974 to April of this year, McQuarrie's office handled 192,078 requests for weather information, processing 76 weather charts (covering the entire northern hemisphere) each day and receiving reports from 500 B.C. stations daily.

In the years he's been in the service, McQuarrie says computers and satellites have been the biggest breakthrough in producing massive amounts of data.

Weather charts are now both drawn and plotted by computers.

McQuarrie says the Victoria office has earned a place of respect well outside B.C. borders.

"We get long-distance calls from people planning to fly their executive jets, say, from New Jersey to San Francisco, because they believe our service to be superior to theirs," he said.

Himself a sailor, McQuarrie and his staff are well-known to yachtsmen for the briefings his office provides for those competing in the Victoria-Maui and Swiftsure races.

McQuarrie would like to see more of the boating public use the service the Victoria office can provide.

Born in Edson, Alberta, McQuarrie has held a variety of positions in the service. He is an honorary life director of the Calgary Flying Club, fellow of the Royal Meteorological Society and a member of the Canadian Meteorological Society.

Almost as well-known in photographic circles, McQuarrie is a director of the Color Photographic Association of Canada.

A retirement dinner is being planned by his friends and colleagues and will take place at 6:30 p.m. in the Sidney Travelodge on Friday, Aug. 29.

Stepping down, McQuarrie foresees no major advances in his profession in the years ahead.

He does, however, see far greater use of the service.

"In the early days aviation was a high hazard business," he said, "And concentration had to be made on providing information for that field. Now the hazard has gone out of flying.

"I would like to see fishing, agriculture and forestry and other areas making fuller use of our facilities."

Peninsula Eyes Well System To Ease Thirst

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

In their quest for water the thirsty Saanich Peninsula municipalities appear ready to splurge $10,000 on an odds-on bet which could reap winnings, in the form of long-term expenditure savings, of at least 1,000 times that figure.

There were clear indications of the municipal politicians' betting mood at a public meeting in Central Saanich municipal hall on Thursday, even though many of the peninsula farmers present seemed to think the risks not worth taking.

For the $10,000 outlay, the municipalities of Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney would get a Vancouver firm's expert appraisal of the peninsula's groundwater potential — its ability to supply the area's water needs from a system of deep wells for at least the next 10 years.

And if, as the firm's spokesman told Thursday's meeting, that potential is found to be as good as they believe, up to six million gallons of water a day could be pumped from water-containing fissures as deep as 1,000 feet.

Bill Brown, of the geotechnical consultants Piteau Gadsby MacLeod Ltd., said that would be enough water for 100,000 people, about five times the peninsula's present population.

He estimated the approximate cost of tapping this subterranean water source, including well drilling, monitoring and construction of a distribution system, would be about $500,000.

By contrast, piping surface water up the peninsula from the Greater Victoria water system would cost at least $10 million.

Included in the report which the Vancouver firm has offered to prepare would be a complementary study by a civil engineering firm, Sir William Halcrow and Partners, on the bulk distribution system needed to bring the groundwater to peninsula consumers.

Following the meeting Central Saanich Ald. David Hill, who is chairman of the Peninsula Water Committee made up of all municipalities and water utilities in the area, said he is confident that there will be municipal support authorizing the study by the two companies.

Even if that backing isn't forthcoming from North Saanich and Sidney, he said, he will recommend that Central Saanich go it alone in commissioning the report.

Brown told the meeting that aerial photographs of the Greater Victoria area show a "whole vast system" of interconnecting fracture zones which cut through the bedrock.

It is this network of fracture zones, stretching all the way from Sooke Lake (possibly including the Malahat) and up the peninsula which contains huge quantities of groundwater.

If the studies show it to be necessary, he said, the wells could be so designated that they could be "recharged" by surface water piped from Elk Lake during the winter months, when there is excess water from the lake available to the peninsula.

This would build up reserves of water ready for intensive irrigation during the dry summer periods, when peninsula water consumption is about eight times heavier than winter use. Surface reservoirs could also be constructed to supplement storage capacity.

Brown tried to allay fears that if a complex of municipal wells were developed, producing several million gallons of water per day, it would drain water from existing shallow wells on the peninsula.

He said, the latter are generally in the unconsolidated sands and gravels overlaying the bedrock, and "we know from experience" that this shallow aquifer or water-bearing zone is not directly connected to the deeper fracture zones.

To prevent any siphoning effect from one to the other the well shafts could be sealed, he explained. But under questioning from the skeptical peninsula farmers, Brown admitted that this safeguard would not be foolproof if there were "windows" or interconnecting openings between the shallow and deeper layers.

In reply to one farmer who sought a guarantee that "you are not going to drain us dry," he said such questions would form an essential part of the study.

Asked how much "lead time" or warning period there might be in the event that municipal wells were petering out, Brown said through proper monitoring there should be at least a five-year warning. "Wells don't dry up overnight," he added.

J. E. Bosher, chairman of the Sidney Water Works District, said Brown's firm had located 10 wells for the utility, and although three had proved too high in chloride content only one of the 10 was an actual failure.

"That was a pretty good average," he commented.

Bosher said the peninsula's only alternative, hooking up to the Greater Victoria system, would be unrealistically expensive, whereas "if we all combine we can afford it" (an exploration and drilling program for groundwater).

"Let's give it a try," he urged.

Elk Lake Weed Feed For Victoria Gardens

Greater Victoria residents will soon be able to use weeds from Elk Lake to feed their garden patches.

Dr. Bob Langford, who is heading a project designed to rid Saanich lakes of weed problems, reports collected weeds will be made available to the public starting next Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., every day except Saturdays and Sundays.

The weeds will be in a box situated near the concession at Beaver Lake.

The Irish have been using seaweed for centuries to nurture vegetable gardens.

Langford said the weeds should be left to dry for a few days and then used as a mulch.

"You rotortill them in and they really break up clay," he said. "You end up with fine loam after two or three years."

Part of Langford's project, which he is carrying out for the Environmental Centre of Greater Victoria with the cooperation of Saanich's parks department, is to establish the economic feasibility of composting lake weeds.

Langford, who is also a consultant for Saanich's program of restoring the municipality's waterways, has had the parks department build three special compost boxes.

In one sawdust is being added, in another hay is being used and fertilizer is being added to the third one.

"The problem is that the weeds have too much water which impedes bacterial activity," Langford said. "We are trying different methods to see what can be done."

He estimated it would take two weeks to reduce the weeds to compost.

Langford said he would be making recommendations at the end of the summer which could result in a much more efficient method of ridding lakes of weeds.

"I will probably recommend a different type of cutting machine which not only cuts but pulls the weeds onto a platform where most of the water is squeezed out," he said.

Langford said if an efficient weed-garnering program is initiated it should be done by the Capital Regional District because Langford Lake and others in the regional district are affected as well as Saanich's Prospect, Elk and Beaver Lakes.

He estimated the cost of the machine he recommends at $80,000.

Langford suggested the cost of composing the weeds could be underwritten by charging a nominal fee, perhaps 25 cents, for each bag.

Murder Attempt Charge Dropped

A charge of attempted murder, laid against James Ronald Page, was dismissed by Judge William Ostler following completion Thursday of the preliminary hearing in Victoria provincial court.

Ostler said there was not enough evidence to commit Page to a higher court for trial before judge and jury.

Instead, the judge ordered a higher court trial on a reduced two-count charge of causing bodily harm to Philip Brennan, 29, and possession of a weapon for a purpose dangerous to public peace.

Page, 27, of 476 Dupplin, had been originally charged May 15 with attempted murder following a shooting incident earlier that day in which Brennan suffered a single wound.

At the end of the hearing Thursday, Ostler released Brennan and two other prosecution witnesses on their own recognizance pending trial in the fall. The bonds were $300 for Brennan, $1,000 for David Bennett and $250 for Janice Brown.

Warrants had been issued by Ostler for the arrest of the three when they failed to appear at the hearing last Thursday despite being served subpoenas.

ASK THE TIMES

Q—For years we were told that lanolin softened the skin and benefitted the hair and scalp. Now I find that creams and shampoos are not made with lanolin. I was told this in two shops today. Can you tell me why? H.M.C.

A—The pharmacist in a leading Victoria store suggests you are misinformed. Lanolin continues to be used commonly as a cosmetic ingredient, valued for its softening qualities. But a number of products which made the most of advertising their lanolin content during a vogue in recent years have since gone off the market.

PROPHETIC SIGN on Oak Bay Junction apartment block might lead one to believe it will self-destruct or crumble under the wrecking ball but in fact, marquee's days are marked only because city bylaw prohibiting third-party advertising signs and billboards becomes effective Aug. 24.

Leave Parkland, Council Urged

Parkland should not be developed to provide a recreation centre for senior citizens, Victoria's parks committee agreed Thursday.

The committee urged council to ignore an earlier proposal that part of a small park at Michigan and Menzies be used for construction of a centre for the James Bay New Horizons group.

Instead, it suggests the city consider purchasing privately owned property near the park, which has a single-family home on the site. The money would come from the Neighborhood Improvement Program funding for James Bay.

Council has been divided on the parkland development issue in recent weeks, with some members claiming the site was the only suitable one by virtue of its central location, while others strongly opposed the principle of permitting any development on parkland.

At Thursday's meeting Ald. Bob Ellis again spoke out against erosion of parks for any purpose. He noted that even if a building were permitted in the James Bay Park, it might prove inadequate for the association's use in a few years and then there would be pressure to develop adjoining land.

In other business, the committee recommended that the city agree to bargain with the Capital Regional District on the transfer of the city-owned Durrance Lake, in the Highlands, to regional jurisdiction.

But aldermen stressed that they are not prepared to consider transfer of the park property for a "nominal" price. The figure must be a realistic one, although instead of cash the city would accept a cash "credit."

Under this proposal, the agreed value of the city property would be "banked" by the region, representing the city's share of any future regional parkland acquisitions.

Committee members didn't seem to hold out much hope of reaching agreement, however.

Mayor Peter Pollen noted that a similar proposal, for the transfer of the city's Thetis Lake Park to the regional parks system, has been "wallowing around" in inconclusive argument for at least four years.

Putting the Stretch on a Skinny Buck

WHAT WITH INFLATION, recession, strikes and layoffs, the times are tough and getting tougher. The shrunken Canadian dollar not only buys less but is harder to come by. This is a sorry state of affairs. It also presents a challenge that can't be met by crying in your beer—provided you can afford beer at today's inflated prices.

The challenge is to make one dollar do the work of two or more.

This isn't easy. Sometimes it hurts. But as a freelance couple rarely sure when the next cheque is going to arrive, Win and I have developed an elastic approach to our personal economy.

In our fatcat spells, we can spend like crazy. But we have learned to get full mileage from a dollar when our finances threaten to bottom out.

I'm not boasting about that last accomplishment. Any couple or individual confronted by the need to economize can do the same. Old-age pensioners and others on fixed incomes are committed to dollar-stretching as a matter of harsh necessity every day of the year.

If you find it essential to do likewise, commence by adopting a proper down-to-earth attitude. The struggle for survival has no place for false pride of the sort that puts a premium on keeping up with the Joneses, but it does demand a certain hard-shell arrogance.

You are going to cut down, substitute, put off and do without in the healthy conviction that slashing your outgo make sense. And you should realize that the relative who criticizes or the friend who offers sympathy may very well be envying your ability to tighten your belt at need.

The three basic areas on which you'll concentrate your efforts to conserve are shelter, fuel and food.

Shelter first. If you're a householder, do what you can to keep your place up, with particular attention to weather-stripping and insulation. It won't be long until your furnace is humming its cool-weather tune once more, and a house that bleeds heat is no aid to economy.

Take care of larger repairs that can't be avoided. Ignored, a roof leak can ruin a ceiling when the rains come. Otherwise, shelve home improvements that cost bucks until a more propitious time.

Whether you live in a house or an apartment, don't move except for the most solid of reasons — a good job guaranteed elsewhere, or a spectacularly better rent or mortgage deal. Moving not only costs. With it go a troop of related expenses that rear their heads when you've made the shift.

Fuel means warmth. Fuel costs. Even here on Canada's sundeck, we can't escape fuel bills. An inefficiently-functioning furnace can hike those bills. A lower thermostat setting supplemented by a light sweater will help reduce them. The householder with a free-standing fireplace or a built-in one that is more than a living-room ornament can whittle the high cost of heating still further by rustling his own wood.

The place to find firewood is on any accessible beach along these Island shores. You don't need a saw or even an axe to garner it. Forget about the logs. The area beachcomber has first claim on those under the terms of his licence. Concentrate on the small stuff; the chunky fir knots, the cedar fragments that make excellent kindling, the nuggets of Douglas fir bark that burn almost like coal.

Load your car trunk with this concentrated heat. But since car fuel also costs like the very devil, stretch it by combining your wood-foraging with other errands. We came home from our last car ramble with a load of bark, wild blackberries, and a batch of bargain corn sold over the tailgate of a parked truck.

This brings us to the important matter of how to eat for less, which I propose to tackle in detail next week. Enough for the moment that it can be done, and that the quality of your meals needn't be downgraded.

What I'm passing on here won't achieve miracles of saving for you. From our experience, however, I can assure you that small practical economies will make dollars last longer.

I haven't touched on entertainment or clothing because these items, with one exception, don't figure in a hard times budget. Make your own entertainment. Unless your butt is showing through the patches, wear what you've got.

The exception: even if you have to compensate by cutting down elsewhere, bolster your morale once in a while by permitting yourself a treat. Not an expensive one. The restaurant lunch we staked ourselves to when our roller-coaster economy was at lowest drag left change from a five.

But it gave our day a needed boost, and made the world seem brighter.

Skipper Turns 84 In Hospital Bed

Freeman "Skipper" King is 84 today — but he's celebrating his birthday in hospital.

King, a self-taught naturalist who has guided thousands of children in local nature rambles over many years, has undergone surgery and is reported in satisfactory condition at Victoria General Hospital. He was admitted to hospital with an unspecified problem eight days ago.

Lean and leathery, King retired from his job as Goldstream provincial park naturalist in April this year but continued active in the field, as a volunteer naturalist at Thomas Francis Park.

He continues as a Times columnist as well, his weekly Nature Rambles interrupted only by his current illness.

He has been as well a Boy Scout commissioner for over four decades and in 1972 was made a freeman of Saanich, only the third to receive that honor.

Mail Plant Model Unveiled

Only 10 people turned up Thursday night for an informational meeting in Royal Oak about the Post Office's $8 million mail handling plant to be built in that area.

The meeting was called by the federal post office and public works departments to show residents the model of the 123,000 square foot building which will be constructed on a 12-acre site between Glanford and the Pat Bay Highway in Saanich.

Construction is slated to begin on the building in late August or September, but landscaping of the grounds will start immediately, a post office spokesman said.

The one-storey building, with terraced administration offices at the front of the complex, will house the new mechanized sorting equipment which will handle the majority of standard letter-type mail.

A post office spokesman said the Victoria office now handles about 400,000 pieces of mail per day, but studies show that it will have to be able to handle more than one million pieces a day by 1980.

Staff now working in the downtown post office on mail processing will move to the new office when it is completed in late 1976. Counter clerks and mail delivery employees will continue to work at their current locations.

One of the features of the complex is an outdoor exercise track and an indoor recreation area for employees.

Technique Helps Asthmatic Children

CHICAGO (AP) — A program developed at Children's Memorial Hospital here has shown that asthmatic children can sometimes be taught to prevent their attacks.

Dr. Aman Khan, hospital staff psychiatrist and faculty member at Northwestern University medical school, has devised a method of helping the children to unlearn the asthmatic response to emotional upsets which frequently contribute to their illness.

Although initial attacks may be triggered by allergies or infections, a child's unmet emotional needs may signal future attacks.

In the experimental program, the children breathed into an apparatus that measured the volume of exhaled air. The experiments became a game for them, Dr. Khan said, when they were rewarded for relaxing and thereby increasing the volume of exhaled air.

Later, slight asthma attacks were induced with pictures which reminded the children of something emotionally upsetting or with drugs or by other means. Most of the children who had the experimental training were able to overcome the attack in a few minutes, he said, and were able to use this training at home when they felt an attack coming on.

There were 35 children, ages 8 to 15, in the study. All were under medical treatment for asthma but had continued to have an unusually high number of attacks — some of them more than 100 a year.

The children who had training reduced the frequency of their attacks to about 1-10th the previous level, he said, and had few attacks compared with untrained asthmatic children.

Not Built Up

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl. My problem is that I am flat, and most boys go for built-up chicks. I know you are going to say, "Wear padded bras," but where will that get me?

I eat everything that is good for me. Fresh fruit, and vegetables, and milk, but it all goes to my stomach, thighs and butt.

I am always cut down because I'm flat. I have to wear children's clothes because I have a 30 AA bust and my hips are 31½. I am 5'1" and weigh 95 pounds.

I see stuff advertised in magazines, but I haven't sent for any because, in the first place, I don't see how creams can put inches on your bust, and, in the second, my Mom opens all the mail. She would kill me if she knew I was even thinking about anything like that.

Please be a friend and put your answer in the paper. There must be at least a million girls with my problem. Flat.

DEAR FLAT: You are a very wise girl to wonder how creams could put inches on you. They can't. Be patient. And I AM going to tell you to wear a padded bra. At least you will look better in clothes.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law runs her house without any schedule or system. She is 31 and so is her husband. Their children are 2 and 4.

They eat when they're hungry and go to sleep when they're tired.

I told them nicely that they should get on some kind of schedule, but they paid no attention to me. I also sent them a book on basic child care and nutrition, but I haven't seen any signs of their having read it.

She puts off the housekeeping chores that almost every homemaker does routinely. She just plays with the children and dresses them like dolls, forgetting that balanced meals and a set routine are important to good health.

Please tell me what to do. My nerves get shot every time I go over there and see what is going on. Mother-In-Law.

DEAR MOTHER-IN-LAW: Be kind to yourself, and don't go over there so often if it upsets you. If your son isn't aware that his wife needs straightening out, let it go. You've done all you can.

DEAR ABBY: About the woman who was "fuming" because her teenage daughter had her ears pierced while she was away for the weekend, knowing that she wouldn't have approved:

I am the proud father of two clean-cut-looking BOYS, ages 17 and 18. Each one wears a round gold ring through his left pierced ear.

This doesn't bother me. I view it as a sign of the times, and the possible revival of the days when it was customary for males to wear earrings. John

FAMILY PLANNERS AWARD DOUBLE BED

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's Family Planning Association has named its Mother of the Year—and awarded her a double bed.

The association, which gives thousands of women advice on family planning each year and provides free contraception, chose for its accolade Katy Snell, a married 27-year-old former teacher with two children.

She was selected from 2,000 entrants by a 21-question quiz on contraception and women's status.

As well as a double bed, Mrs. Snell won a knitting machine, a freezer and a holiday in Majorca for two.

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

The most revolutionary and acutely modern program for the care of the mentally ill in the western world has been in full swing at least 500 years in the little city of Gheel in Belgium.

This dedicated city came by its calling, according to the legend, when an Irish-born princess, who had fled to Gheel to pursue a spiritual life, was beheaded for resisting the incestuous demands of her mad father.

Her martyrdom was interpreted by the people of Gheel as an indication that God had granted her the role of patron saint of the mentally ill.

The story of St. Dymphna's example spread through the nearby countryside and later throughout Europe, bringing pilgrims to her tomb seeking her intercession on behalf of the insane. The Church of St. Dymphna became a holy refuge to which the mentally ill came in ever increasing numbers.

In the 17th century, patients began to be housed with the townsfolk and the citizens became accustomed to living at first hand with the mentally ill.

The church gave over its guardianship of the sick to the state in the mid-19th century, and medical directors took over, but the practice of boarding the patients in the town continued and has increased to this day.

More than 3,000 patients can be seen mingling with the townsfolk, working at jobs that correspond to their capacities, and living as welcome guests in the houses of those members of the community who are "certified" as worthy of the privilege of housing the city's charges.

To be "certified" in Gheel is to be publicly acknowledged as morally and socially qualified to participate in the privileged mission of the town's special destiny.

Observers have remarked that, unlike the fearful and anxious attitude that characterizes most modern non-professional contact with the insane, the citizens of Gheel are sympathetic and practical. They treat their guests with hospitality and welcome them into a productive working relationship with the community.

Outside the infirmary, there is no psychiatric treatment, no psychotherapy, no analysis.

The prospectus of the program attests to the committment to work as the means to psychological balance and the beneficience of untrammelled freedom for even the most precarious psyche.

"Work is to be given the patient by his guardian, to help him but not to hurt him. To be able to work gives one satisfaction. The patient is able then to pay for what he receives with good and useful labor in the family and the community in which he has been placed. The pecuniary side is of less importance than the moral satisfaction derived from occupation. Nevertheless the receipt of compensation imbues one with a feeling of happiness, especially when the other members of the family are receiving compensation."

There seems to be no problems of violence in Gheel; such responses are rechanneled, diverted or spent in unhindered activity and the freedom to be human.

Corn Silage Cheap Stock Feed

MOTHER EARTH NEWS

Your crash course in subsistance farming is not complete until you can pronounce "silage" (sigh-lij) correctly and know what it is. Silage is grass or grain plants cut and chopped green and stored in a silo and the drop most successfully made into silage is corn. When the ear reaches the "dent" state, the whole plant is cut, chopped and blown into the silo . . . where it turns brownish and ferments into a feed cows love.

Air spoils silage quickly and must be kept out of the chopped feed. The least expensive way to store the food is in a trench silo, which is nothing but a basement-sized hollow scooped out of the ground. The silage is dumped in, tightly packed by running heavy-tired machinery over it and covered with plastic film. The forage is also packed tightly enough to exclude most air when it's stored in the old wooden upright silos, and the newest vertical silos are coated inside with glass or plastic to make them airtight.

Corn silage is a good cheap feed for subsistence farmers. If you have just a few livestock, though, it won't pay you to get all the equipment necessary to make silage (to (to say nothing of the silo). You can, however, store a small supply of the forage by piling it on the ground, covering it with plastic film and burying the edges of the film in the ground. Ancient, stationary silage choppers can be acquired for a song in dairy country, and most of them will still work if the blades are sharpened. You can cut and tie green corn into bundles and haul them to the chopper.

You can also avail yourself of farmers who have a custom service of chopping silage and filling silos for others.

If I had just one or two cows or goats to feed year 'round, I'd chop up all the stalks from the garden sweet corn patch (right after roasting ear season) with my rotary mower . . . and put the shredded plants into plastic bags. Instant silage!

Young U.S. Consumers Lack Basic Math Skills

WASHINGTON (WP) — Many young consumers lack the basic math skills they need for buying cars or carpets, balancing checkbooks, paying taxes or even cooking turkeys, a national testing project in the U.S. reports.

Women are frequently less skilled than men, the National Assessment of Education Progress found, though presumably women do more shopping and household tasks.

The government-subsidized project's report, based on testing representative samples of various age groups, showed that only 16 per cent of the adults aged 26 to 35 correctly balanced a checkbook in one exercise. Yet 37 per cent said they presently or formerly had a checking account, and 72 per cent said they had balanced a checkbook before.

Another exercise entailed calculating which of these packages of rice offered the lowest price per ounce: 12 ounces for 40 cents, 14 ounces for 45 cents, 1 pound 12 ounces for 35 cents or 2 pounds for 99 cents.

Only 39 per cent of the young adults — 45 per cent of the men and 32 per cent of the women — correctly picked the 1 pound, 12 ounce package.

A third question involved determining the total price tag for a piece of carpet, given its dimensions in feet and price per square yard. Only 26 per cent of the 17-year-olds and 39 per cent of the young adults had the right answer, and the adult males outscored females by 25 percentage points.

Young men also outscored women on questions asking the number of pints of ginger ale needed for two gallons of a punch recipe, and when to put a 12½ pound turkey in the oven — allowing 20 minutes' cooking time per pound — to have it ready by 5 p.m.

Young adults generally performed better than the 17-year-olds, suggesting that they picked up their consumer math skills more through experience than earlier formal instruction.

On transportation matters, only 20 per cent of the adults correctly calculated a taxi fare and 57 per cent had the right answer on a question about parking-lot charges.

One question on taxes asked how much additional sales tax would be charged on a $2,760 new car if the tax rate were increased from 3 to 4 per cent. Only 55 per cent of the adults correctly answered, $27.60.

The same percentage of adults found the correct tax figure or a married couple with three exceptions in federal income tax tables. Another 10 per cent used a table for two exemptions rather than three, while 13 per cent responded flatly, "I don't know."

The exercises generally involved applying abilities to work with fractions, percentages, weights and measures, and to read tables and graphs.

Without such skills, commented Virginia H. Knauer, special White House consumer affairs aide, "consumers will continue to reply mainly on hunches and advertising jingles in their purchases — a trend that must be reversed if consumers are going to use their economic power in today's marketplace."

Mrs. Knauer suggested that women's particularly poor showing on the tests might stem partly from classroom sex stereotypes-attitudes among teachers that math, like science, was a "male" subject more productively taught to boys.

J. Stanley Ahmann, former national assessment director, speculated that widespread classroom use of "New Math," which stresses concepts more than applications, might bear some of the blame.

"Too many students," said Roy H. Forbes, new director of the project, "apparently fail to see the relationship between math courses in school and the use of math in everyday living."

Forbes recommended that parents as well as teachers help students bridge that gap. "When," he asked, "was the last time you took your child to the store and explained how to measure for curtains or select just enough wood for a fence?"

Icons Sold

MOSCOW (AP) — Vladimir Moroz, 45, was recently sentenced to "several years" in prison and had his property confiscated after he was convicted of illegal art sales that netted him $466,282. Soviet newspapers say Moroz purchased paintings and icons from private collections and sold them to foreign diplomats and businessmen.

Campaign to Eliminate Drug 'Bribes' to Doctors

CAVEAT EMPTOR

By LYNNE GORDON

Unlike the rose by any other name that could not possibly smell as sweet, Valium by another name can calm the nerves just as effectively.

Vivol will do it, so will Paxel. Equally effective is the non-brand drug that goes by the generic (common) name "diazepam." In fact, Valium, Vivol and Paxel are all brand names of the same basic chemical "diazepam". The difference is not in quality or effectiveness, but rather in price. Valium for example at 11 cents per five mg pill is a great deal more expensive than the generic chemical diazepam at five cents per five mg pill.

If the drug works just as well and does the same job as the more expensive brand-name drugs, why the price difference?

An important reason is that brand-name drugs are heavily promoted by the companies that make them. Consumers, of course, never see prescription drug advertisements unless they happen to leaf through a medical journal in their doctor's office. This is because prescription drug advertising to the public is illegal in Canada. But companies can advertise to doctors and they do it to the tune of an estimated $50 million dollars a year.

Medical journals are heavily subsidized by drug company advertising and drug company salesmen or detail men regularly visit doctors' offices with information on their products, free samples and gifts for the doctor.

"These are bribes. These are investments in the future," charges Montreal doctor, Murray Katz, who is campaigning to eliminate drug advertising to doctors. "The sad part is that the doctor doesn't realize — doesn't want to realize — that the people who are paying for this questionable education are the people who are the sickest and the oldest. People who use drugs."

Dr. Katz' criticism of drug advertising to doctors has resulted in a heated controversy. Many members of the medical profession are understandably offended by the suggestion that they accept "teaching" from detail men who have a vested interest in the product they sell.

Dr. Bette Stephenson, president of the Canadian Medical Association, doesn't mince words when she reacts to Dr. Katz' comments. "There is only a grain of truth in almost every statement Murray Katz makes. But most of the stuff he says is sheer unadulterated hogwash. To say that doctors are unduly influenced by the advertising of drug companies is just incredibly stupid. The education of doctors on drugs does not take place in the hands of drug manufacturers but rather within medical schools and within programs of continuing education."

The drug companies also have a plan underway to take out some of the sting from Dr. Katz' criticism. John Turnbull, executive director of the Canadian Pharmaceudical Association, says that the industry is moving towards the establishment of a pre-clearance program for drug advertising. Ads not cleared by the new commission would not be published. The program would be primarily financed by the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Turnbull says, and would include representatives of the drug industry, pharmacists, doctors, consumers, publishers and the advertising industry.

Surveys of drug prices in Canadian pharmacies have revealed incredible differences. Prices for the same drugs can vary up to 400 per cent, even more, according to Dr. Katz. He says that drug companies "can get away with this, because they don't have to contend with the consumer. All they have to do is to convince the doctor to prescribe and the pharmacist to fill the prescription with their particular brand.

To give consumers a better chance at comparison shopping, it's been suggested that prices of 50 or 100 most important prescription drugs should be posted in the drug stores. "I don't think it's fair that prescriptions should be the only thing consumers buy without knowing what they're buying or how much it will cost until the cash register rings up the sale," Dr. Katz says. "The price chart will tell the consumer which company is selling the same drug as another at double or even five times the price."

Consumers can save small amounts by comparing prices of brand name drugs from one store to another. But savings of 100 to 400 per cent may be possible by changing from one company's drug to another. The only way the consumer can determine which company sells the most economical brand is to compare prices on a chart in the store that lists brands under generic names. For example:

Diazepam five mg:
Valium—Hoffman LaRoche —$5.57—100 pills
Vivol—F. W. Horner—$4.09
Paxel—Elliot Marion—$6.27
Diazepam—I.C.N.—$3.37

A few drug stores have already started price posting and the federal government has promised not to prosecute pharmacists under the Food and Drug Act that prohibits advertising of prescription drugs to the public. The move has caused an undercurrent of discontentment in the profession, not because pharmacists are vehemently opposed to price posting, but because of the way the change was accomplished and the fact that the law is still interpreted by many to include price posting under the heading of "advertising" which is therefore illegal.

Turnbull says that the Canadian Pharmaceudical Association is firm in its opposition to drug advertising to the public but considers price posting a "lesser evil" if some action is necessary in response to consumer or political pressure. Any pharmacist in Canada can now post prices without fear of prosecution, Mr. Turnbull says, "but it hasn't really caught on."

Price posting is beneficial to consumers who can get a better deal for themselves by:

—asking their pharmacists to post prices and provide more information and an opportunity to participate for consumers in drug purchases.

—asking their doctors to prescribe generic name drugs rather than brand names.

—asking their pharmacists to substitute a cheaper generic drug if a doctor has prescribed an expensive brand-name drug. Product selection by pharmacists is legal in all provinces other than the Maritimes. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have legislation in the works to permit product selection or "substitution."

"We're making good time . . . OOPS! What was THAT?"

DENNIS THE MENACE

"YOU REALLY DONE IT THIS TIME ... MR. WILSON IS OFFERIN' A REWARD FOR YOU!"

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

At a national tournament some years ago, at the end of the fourth round of play a 14-year-old tournament staffer (known as a "caddy") was going from table to table, picking up the slips showing the results of the deals played at each table in her section. As she passed one of the tables, an elderly gentleman pinched her, Italian style.

When she had collected all of her slips, she dashed downstairs to tell her supervisor, a Mrs. Martin, about the incident. "I was picking up my slips, Mrs. Martins, and a man pinched me."

"What did you say?" inquired Mrs. Mrtin.

The answer came forth promptly: "Ouch."

At the conclusion of today's deal, our South declarer had good cause to say "ouch," for the line of play he adopted was the correct one — but, unfortunately, it was also the losing one.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

A diamond was the only lead that could give declarer a problem — and West found it. East's jack was taken by South's ace.

Before attacking the trump suit, South had to dispose of his diamond loser. One of the possibilities was to take the heart finesse. If it won, a club could then be ruffed, after which the ten of diamonds could be discarded on the heart ace. This was a 50-50 proposition.

The other possibility was to cash the ace, king, and queen of clubs, discarding dummy's three remaining diamonds. Then dummy could be entered via the heart ace, and a trump led. This offered a much better chance than the 50-50 heart finesse, since it required nothing more than a not-too-unreasonable division of the adversely held clubs: either a 4-4 or a 5-3 split.

So, at tricks two, three, and four, declarer led his ace, king, and queen of clubs. As can be observed, West ruffed the third club lead with the queen, and the slam contract was defeated. As can also be observed, if declarer had taken the "inferior" heart finesse, he would have fulfilled his contract.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

This is No. 6000 in the FWF series, so today we have a Magic Square based on that number.

That means a sequence of consecutive positive numbers, arranged in a square checkerboard style so that each row, each column, and each diagonal will add up to the same magic total.

Then the difference between the squares of the smallest and greatest numbers in the sequence will be 6000. One of the numbers in the square is 121, so now figure out what the greatest and smallest numbers must be.

REGENSBURG, West Germany — A wartime love letter written by German bomber pilot Hartmut Paul has finally reached his wife — after 35 years at the bottom of the sea. It was found in a waterproof pouch retrieved by amateur skin divers from the sunken wreckage of a German plane which crashed in a Norwegian fjord in 1940. Paul, now a sugar company director, had given the letter to a courier whose plane was shot down.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — A Minneapolis man is going to court in an effort to have his mother-in-law evicted from his house by Sept. 15. Robert Hail says his mother-in-law, Zetta Mullen, has lived in his house for 10 years as a "voluntary guest" and has refused to move out. Hail's wife termed the situation "grotesque."

BOGOTA, Colombia — A court has ruled that a killing in defence of the flag of a political party is justifiable homicide. Judge Cesar Montoya acquitted political organizer Arquimedes Cardenas of a charge of murder when he killed one of a crowd of persons who had tried to burn his party's flag.

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. — Pte. Daniel W. Shears, 19, of Bay Verte, Nfld., was dismissed from the Canadian Armed Forces and sentenced to 15 months in detention as his court martial concluded Thursday. Trudeau Defends Fight Over Property Taxes

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Thursday he stands to save "many hundreds of dollars a year" if he wins a dispute over property taxes on land he owns in the Laurentians near the new Mirabel Airport . . . not just $8 as previously reported.

Trudeau told a news conference he was displeased personally by the choice of the Mirabel site because it was close to his 632-acre wooded property near Seize-Iles Lake north of Montreal.

He said he did not gain financially and does not stand to gain from the choice of the new Montreal international airport site about 25 miles from his property.

"The Mirabel site was chosen for all kinds of reasons," Trudeau said. "Some of us indicated a displeasure on a personal basis."

He, like landowners everywhere, wants other such facilities to be "as far away as possible from the jumbo jets," he added.

He rebuked reporters for quoting officials in the municipality of St. Adolphe D'Howard as saying that his property tax dispute involved an overpayment of only $8.

In fact, he said, he would save hundreds of dollars annually if he wins his case against the municipality, in which his land and small cottage are located.

An official in Trudeau's office later refused to provide details of how much is being claimed in overpaid taxes.

The dispute began last March when Mr. Trudeau wrote to the municipality saying he was being taxed at more than the rate set by Quebec law for farms and woodlots.

Trudeau told reporters the land holding was a private estate and would only be considered a commercial investment if he sold it or the lumber from it.

"It is the only property I own in Canada and I am pleased to have it," he said.

WARDENS ATTACKED

GRAND FALLS, Nfld. (CP) — Federal fisheries river wardens in central Newfoundland have been traveling in pairs at night as protection against attack by salmon poachers.

A warden required 13 stitches to close a facial wound after he was struck by a poacher with a stick. Another warden nearly drowned when he was pushed into a river and became entangled in a poacher's net.

A federal fisheries officer said today in an interview that about 100 charges have been laid against poachers and dozens of illegal nets have been confiscated as wardens, aided by RCMP, continue a crackdown on poachers.

PLANE HUNT BOOSTED IN NORTH

EDMONTON (CP) — The search for two British Columbia doctors missing since their home-made seaplane disappeared Tuesday while on a fishing trip in the Northwest Territories is to be stepped up.

Three additional rescue aircraft, including an Argus long-range patrol plane, will be added to the effort today, widening the scope of the search to cover 50,000 square miles.

To date, four aircraft have taken part in the search for the missing plane, pilot Dr. Arthur Mandeville and passenger Dr. T. A. Whittaker, both of Penticton.

About 90 people will take part in the search during the 16½ hours of daylight today.

Cannonball's Sax Stilled . . .

ADDERLEY
. . . jazz giant

By United Press International

Julian "Cannonball" Adderley who died today in a Gary, Ind., hospital of a coronary arrest used his alto saxophone to form a bridge between far out modern jazz and the more down-to-earth, church-based style of music.

He was 46 and had spent the last month of his life unconscious, his heart kept beating by mechanical means.

"He was one of the musicians in modern jazz who almost instantly was recognized as a very substantial player," said Charles Mitchell, associate editor of Downbeat.

"What he really did was to form a bridge between the bop style of Charlie Parker and his innovative modern jazz, and the earlier style of Bennie Carter, also a real alto giant," said Mitchell.

"What Cannonball combined was advanced harmonics and melodic techniques with the more early blues base, the church base, the funky style of the late 50s, and almost instantly because of that fusion he was recognized as a unique player. He made the roofs of bop style much more apparent."

Adderley joined the Miles Davis group in 1957 and was with George Shearing two years later. Two of his most popular commercial hits were This Here and Mercy, Mercy, Mercy.

Bell Rings Tuesday for Next Round of Forest Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The bell sounds Tuesday for the next round in a forest industry dispute that may determine whether the British Columbia economy will receive a staggering body blow or if the protagonists will continue sparring to a decision.

Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court is to bring down his non-binding recommendations on the dispute after being appointed special mediator by the government a month ago.

While the labor situation has slowly deteriorated, it is difficult to gauge the success of Mr. Justice Hutcheon's mediation efforts.

The latest jabs in the dispute came Tuesday from Art Gruntman, western vice-president of the Canadian Paperworkers Union, who said he does not share the optimism of other forest union leaders that progress is being made.

"The forest companies still have the same hard-nosed attitude they've had since June," said Gruntman, whose union, along with the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers, rejected a plea by provincial Labor Minister Bill King to keep working during Mr. Justice Hutcheon's appointment.

"I haven't seen anything happen that leads me to believe a mediated settlement is possible."

Reg Ginn, president of the PPWC and Jack Munro, western regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, had earlier expressed optimism about the mediation effort.

The 12,700 pulp workers have closed all 20 paper mills in B.C. since July 16. Ten mills had been closed before the strike deadline — six due to strikes, three by scheduled maintenance and one by a strike-lockout dispute.

So far, the effects of the strike have been minimal, although closure of the pulp mills has resulted in layoffs for about 15,000 IWA members. PPWC members Wednesday expanded their picketing of Vancouver Island forest operations employing IWA members.

Many of the closures have been expected as the pulp companies announced planned shutdowns before the strike to run down massive inventories which built up because of soft markets.

While the pulp mills are not expected to suffer for about a month, lumber companies are starting to feel the pinch as the market for wood chips is cut off. A strige now would come just as the lumber markets are showing tentative signs of recovery.

Economists have not been able to forecast with certainty the effects of a total forest shutdown, but a 1973 government study showed that 50 cents of every dollar earned in the province comes from the woods industry.

The study also showed that the forest industry employs 10 per cent of the B.C. work force and each job in the forest industry is related to two jobs in other industries.

The provincial government, already hit by the strike at Columbia Cellulose, the Prince Rupert mill in which it has a 79-per-cent interest, would be among the heavy losers in the rippling effects of a forest strike.

In 1974, the government collected $197.2 million in royalties, taxes and other charges from the industry. the figure was $244.8 million the previous year, an exceptionally good year for the lumber market.

Transportation companies also would be hard hit. The two largest towboat operations in B.C. generate half their revenue from the forest industry. Wood products also mean 77 per cent of B.C. Rail's carloadings. 85 per cent of Canadian National Railways' carloads forwarded from B.C. and 10 per cent of CP Rail's revenues.

B.C. Rail would lose $2.9 million a month and CP Rail $5 million. An estimate was not available from CNR.

King has said the government will not accept a closure of B.C.'s major industry which would result if the pulp and woodworker unions struck together for the first time.

A strike would be "tantamount to a general strike" which could bring the provincial economy to its knees, the minister said.

The unions began saying that only government intervention could avoid a total shutdown after the industry made its offer: continuation of a cost-of-living clause that provided increases totalling 24 cents an hour during the last year.

Since the offer was made, supermarket clerks earning $10,920 a year and meatcutters making $13,832 have rejected an increase of $1.30 an hour.

The 30,000 coast IWA members and 7,000 more in the southern Interior of the province want a one-year contract with an increase of $1 an hour on a salary scale that ranges from a base rate of $5.10 an hour to $7.50 for top tradesmen.

The pulp unions want an increase of $1.50 an hour on the same base rate. Their contracts expired June 30, the same date as that of the IWA in the southern Interior. The coast IWA contract expired June 15.

Grentman said the offer by the 120 forest companies "was a joke and was treated as such."

Ginn said it was "nothing but a charade" and Munro predicted "the industry should start coming to their senses fairly soon."

In making their offer, the 120 companies said they can't do any better and remain competitive.

"There are no further resources, advantages or uncommitted funds which the industry can draw upon to sustain its work force with wage scales far out of proportion to those workers in competitive areas," the industry said in a brief to Mr. Justice Hutcheon.

It said American competitors get their labor for 12 per cent less and this is an important factor because 60 per cent of the industry's costs represent labor.

Asylum Sought

QUITO, Ecuador (Reuter) — A leading member of Peru's left-wing military government has crossed into Ecuador to seek political asylum, a diplomatic source said Wednesday. The source said Gen. Jose Graham Hurtado, former prefect of Lima and a member of President Juan Velasco Alvarado's committee of advisers, arrived Tuesday in Guayaquil port. A Guyaquil newspaper, El Universo, reported that the general had left Peru because of a purge of top army officers.

PARKS AROUND US

Mill Hill Opened

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

One of the least known Capital Regional parks is Mill Hill, situated near Langford.

Residents nearby are not going to be too pleased that this park is getting some attention because for years it has been a sort of a private walking area for poeple in the surrounding area.

The tendency today is to say as little as possible about favorite walking, camping or picnic areas for fear they will attract too many people. Mill Hill has been one of these.

Mill Hill is not a big park, about 150 acres, but it has an attractive summit which provides spectacular views of the city and the Highland district, ineluding smog which hangs heavily over the city on windless, summer days.

Arbutus and scrub oak have replaced fir trees on thesummit and it is doubtful if evergreens will ever take hold again there. Once a dry site with thin soil is logged, nature is seldom able to bring it back to its original state.

The Capital Region is building a pathway through the park which takes you to the Trans-Canada Highway. From there it joins up with the Thetis Lake trail. The two trails making an interesting walk for people who like exercise.

The best way to get to the park is to go to Langford via Colwood, turn right on Millstream Road, just past the railway track, then turn sharply onto Atkin Road. Travel east on Atkin, past Selwyn Road, until you come to Park Road.

The road will take you to a parking area where the trail begins.

Prisoners' Union Just 'Ridiculous'

Canadian Press

The president of the British Columbia Federation of Peace Officers said Thursday any attempts by Canadian prisoners to form a union would be "absolutely ridiculous."

Phil Jamieson, recently elected to head the 1,300-strong organization, made the statement during tapeing of B.C.-CTV's Capital Comment for viewing Sunday. Constable Jamieson is a detective with the Saanich police force.

"It's absolutely ridiculous. I couldn't say it any stronger. A union, or association, is generally for the betterment of its members, but the basic difference is that those people have forfeited certain rights by committing crimes against the public, against the community," he said.

"For them to have bargaining rights for steak three times a day or more salary ... to me it's absolutely incredible that we succumb to that sort of thing. If we do, then our society is in very serious trouble."

Constable Jamieson said he had no objections to prisoners' complaints being heard or any injustices in the prison system being rectfied.

Flights Cancelled

ROME (AP) — A pilots strike forced the Italian airline Alitalia to cancel most of its international flights Thursday and also reduced domestic and European operations, officials said.

Fishermen Vote To Break Split

Most fishermen in B.C. are voting again today on a contract recommended by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union executive, after the first ballots Thursday produced a split in the vote.

The Victoria local of the UFAWU will not hold a second vote because the local members voted unanimously in the first ballot for acceptance of the contract offered by the Fisheries Association, local secretary-treasurer Elgin Neish said today.

"We've already stated our position clearly so we won't be holding another vote," Neish said.

When the ballots were counted Thursday, they showed the tendermen section of the union had 76 per cent in favor of the contract; the shoreworkers voted 78 per cent in favor, but the fishermen voted 62 per cent against acceptance of the contract which would end the two-week strike.

Neish said the fishermen are being asked to "reanalyze their position in light of the acceptance by the other sections."

He said that under the union's constitution no one section can sign a contract without the other sections also having a proper contract.

UFAWU president Homer Stevens said the negotiating committee is urging full reconsideration and is calling on the fishermen to accept the offer.

The results of today's second vote will be tallied in Vancouver at 6 p.m. If the fishermen change their minds and vote in favor of the contract, fishing could resume by 6 p.m., Monday.

The offer from the Fisheries Association, which represents 14 major fish-packing companies on the B.C. coast, provides 62 cents a pound for sockeye, compared to 52 cents last year; an increase to 24 cents a pound from 22 cents for pinks; 30 cents for chums and 68 cents a pound for large springs.

The UFAWU had originally asked for 80 cents a pound for this year's salmon catch.

Tendermen have been offered an increase of $170 a month for a 14-day month and the shoreworkers were offered an increase of $1.10 an hour on a base rate of $4.76 an hour.

A spokesman for the Native Brotherhood of B.C., the organization which represents most Indian fisermen, said its members have voted 92.2 per cent in favor of the association's offer.

About 1,000 fish per hour were sold Thursday at the Victoria union's first public fish sale.

Neish said the sale of the 5,000 fish startd at 10 a.m. and the clean-up was all completed by about 4 p.m.

"We could have sold more fish, there were still a few people coming around about 5 p.m. but we pretty well satisfied everyone," he said.

Police to Join Fisheries Patrol

VANCOUVER (CP) — Meetings were being held today between federal fisheries authorities and RCMP to arrange police protection for fisheries enforcement officers patrolling the Fraser River.

Approval for police support in a crackdown on salmon poachers was given Thursday by Attorney-General Alex MacDonald.

In answer to a second request from federal Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc for enforcement aid, MacDonald told the fisheries branch it may use police officers where necessary in dealing with potentially dangerous situations. Their use would depend on the size of the problem faced by the fisheries officers, said MacDonald.

Leblanc first asked for provincial approval for arming the fisheries officers. Macdonald said Thursday he did not refuse this but advised against it and offered police support instead.

Fisheries officials say that enforcement patrols have virtually been stopped because of violence and threats of violence encountered by the patrols in checking on illegal salmon netting in the Fraser River between Mission and Hell's gate.

Native Indians are permitted to fish for food three days a week, but fisheries officers say a proportion of legally-caught food fish as well as illegally-caught salmon is being bootlegged on a scale that threatens conservation of spawning stocks.

The International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission this week placed an indefinite ban on all fishing for sockeye and pink salmon in the Fraser River to make up for a recorded loss of some 70,000 spawners.

Dominion Bridge, Lauk Make Peace

Economic Development Minister Gary Lack has officially made peace with Dominion Bridge Ltd. and promised not to discriminate against the steel company.

"... we will encourage and assist wherever we can to ensure the success of that company's operations in this province," Lauk said in a prepared statement released jointly with Dominion executive vice-president R. J. Fricker.

The company plans to close its steel fabricating plant in Burnaby and Lauk first reacted angrily to the closure announcement saying he would support other B.C. steel fabricators to prevent Dominion from selling steel produced outside the province.

But Lauk said Thursday he has been assured of Dominion's long-range plans and the company will consider building another fabricating plant if the market warrants it again.

Until them, existing domestic firms can probably supply the local demand and Dominion can import steel from its other firms to sell on a "spot basis" if the need arises, said Lauk.

The company has promised to co-operate with the government in finding jobs for the 350 employees of the Burnaby plant and will proceed with plans for the steel service centre and reinforcing steel facility on Annacis Island.

An option has also been taken on an adjacent 18-acre site for possible future expansion.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES DEATHS INCREASE

OTTAWA (CP) — Births, marriages and deaths all rose during the 12 months ended June 30 from a year earlier, Statistics Canada said Thursday.

There were 354,242 births registered, up from 337,972 in the comparable year-earlier period. This brought the birth rate per 1,000 persons to 15.6 from 15.2.

Marriages rose 4.5 per cent in the latest period to 205,966 from 197,052 a year earlier.

The number of deaths was up by 1.6 per cent during the 12 months ended in June from a year earlier to 168,170. This left the estimated rate of death registrations per 1,000 people unchanged at 7.4.

Cut-Off Lands Talks Scheduled

Canadian Press

Members of the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs met Thursday with Human Resources Minister Norman Levi to discuss the operations of a proposed three-member committee to work on settlement of the cut-off lands issue.

Adam Eneas of Penticton, spokesman for the UBCIC's cut-off lands committee, said another meeting will be held in about two weeks.

At that meeting, tentatively set for either Aug. 18 or 19, the government will announce its representative to the committee and both sides will chose a third member.

Eneas said he has been chosen as the Indian representative on the committee.

Levi announced in June the committee would report to the government by Dec. 31, 1976 with recommendations on settlement of the cut-off land question.

The government agreed to act on the recommendations on or before June 24, 1977, two years after signing the agreement with the B.C. Indians.

The cut-off issue concerns 36,000 acres of reserve land taken from 23 banks by the 1913-16 federal-provincial McKenna-McBride commission.

The government also announced in June that the first 100 acres of the 36,000 acres would be returned to the Indians as a symbolic gesture by Sept. 1 but Eneas said no decision has been made yet on what land will be turned over.

More Cars on Road

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — An additional 4.2 million motor vehicles were driven on United States roads last year, the transportation department reported Thursday. Total registration of motor vehicles reached 129,943,087.

Conspiracy Trial Delayed to Tuesday

Canadian Press

A provincial court case testing Canada's 1974 invasion of privacy law could take at least another week, Judge William Ostler said Thursday.

Judge Ostler said the trial involving charges of conspiracy to commit robbery against James Archie Hancock, 33, and Gilles Paul Proulx, 30, could be delayed due to a possibility that all evidence must be heard again.

The trial has been conducted as a voir dire, or a trial within a trial, and Judge Ostler must rule on whether the evidence is admissable for the actual trial without hearing it again.

The judge said a recent Supreme Court of Canada decision says the evidence must be heard again unless the lawyers for both sides agree it is not necessary.

He asked defence lawyer Cecil Branson if he agreed to allowing the evidence without a new hearing and Branson replied, "not all of it."

Branson and prosecutor J. W. Anderson agreed to a suggestion by Judge Ostler that they discuss how much evidence must be heard again and report back to the court by Tuesday. Otherwise, he said, the trial could take another week or more.

Hancock and Proulx are charged with conspiracy to commit robbery between April 1 and 25. So far, the case has taken most of 16 sittings in nine court days from July 21.

Because the charge is seen as the first court test of Canada's wiretapping law, the case has been heard in voir dire to determine whether interceptions of private communications were lawfully made and admissable as evidence.

Stopping Those Lettuce Woes

Lettuce is sometimes a problem to a beginning gardener who raises a supply from an outdoor seed sowing. The problem is soft brown rotting of lower stems and the base of leaves.

When a dozen lettuce seedling plants are bought in spring for planting, the problem is not so acute, In this case, remember not to set the stem of the plant down below soil level; only roots go into the soil.

If this is done and overhead watering is seldom, rotting of lettuce should not be present.

When seed is sown in a row, the seedlings are sure to be crowded from the time of emergence until pricking-out time. Even when I sow what is intended as a dozen or so seed at three week intervals, 25 seedlings come up. We don't get down to ground level with our eyes the way we do when sowing in flats and seed boxes on a greenhouse bench.

Crowding of lettuce seedlings is the chief cause of rotting in the home garden. Prevention lies in early thinning so that no two seedlings touch.

Seedlings are transplanted as soon as the seed leaf can be held in the fingers for moving. Lettuce are usable at any size making it possible to transplant first at two-inch spacing in greater numbers than you figure on needing. As the plants grow to a size almost filling the spaces, pull out alternate ones for salads.

Do this each day until those remaining are four inches apart.

According to varieties being grown, lettuce need six to ten inches between plants for full development.

Cos lettuce are satisfied with six inches for their habit is upright. Oakleaf and the red-tinged leaf lettuce and Sarly Simpson need 10 inches, whole Buttercrunch and Bibb will be happy in eight inches for they grow to their delicious peak in a short time.

Left in a tightly packed seed row, any of these varieties develop a soft rot at the base when watered overhead. It is a combination of water lodging between the leaves and the heat. The water drops become unbelievably hot when trapped within the leaves. The leaf tissue is badly damaged and begins to rot away.

If discovered in time, use all the good green parts of a number of lettuce, thinning the row as you go. If a section of the row seems free and clean, thin out and leave for later use.

Water the transplants at the roots while the weather remains warm. Shade with a piece of shiplap or sacking supported on three sticks along the row. This prevents wilting.

The sowing that is made around August 20 will repay extra care. Get down to earth level to sow thinly. Transplant as soon as possible.

Remember not to bury the lettuce stems, then if well spaced the plants will not rot when fall rains begin.

From then on, natural watering should be sufficient for growth.

'Supergrid' Road System Planned for Saskatchewan

REGINA (CP) — A 10-year, $76-million program to transform 5,237 miles of Saskatchewan grid roads into hard-surfaced "supergrids" was unveiled today by the municipal road surfacing commission.

The commission report also suggested hard-surfacing for another 3,457 miles of grid roads as a second priority, a recommendation that could add five years and more than $40 million to the total project.

Although the long-awaited report has prompted concern in some groups, that the recommended supergrids would encourage controversial inland grain terminals, commissioner C. S. Mitchell said in an interview Thursday night the proposed supergrid system was not designed to serve inland terminals.

"There was never any thought given to inland terminals," said Mitchell, who is also president of the Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities.

The recommendations, he said, were primarily based on transportation needs indentified by questioning municipalities.

He added, however, that the quality of the proposed supergrid system would enable it to handle any loads that any oiled highway could handle.

Oppenents of the inland-terminal concept, which critics say would lead to disappearance of small country grain elevators and thus small rural communities, have contended that inland terminals would mean longer grain hauls for farmers, larger trucks, and great expenditures on strengthening country roads.

At a recent National Farmers Union meeting, delegates voiced fears that the report of the three-man commission would be based partially on the requirements of inland terminals. The delegates suggested that the commissioners — Mitchell, chairman Everett Murphy and Norman Allan, all connected with the association of rural municipalities — should have included persons committed to opposing inland terminals.

Cody Given Job

REGINA (CP) — Don Cody, a cabinet minister defeated in the June 11 provincial election, has been hired as an executive of the Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office.

An SGIO announcement said Cody, formerly minister of cooperatives until defeated in Qu'Appelle riding by Liberal Gary Lane, will be in charge of the Automobile Accident Insurance act, the salvage division and a research centre.

Milk Falls Short

REGINA (CP) — Dairy administrator Dave Ewart has warned that Saskatchewan Milk Producers will lose a large portion of their industrial milk quota unless more milk is produced.

The quota, allocated by the Canadian Dairy Commission, is 14.7 million pounds of butterfat for Saskatchewan this year.

Forecast Saskatchewan production, however, is 8.5 to nine million pounds.

Queried on Body

RED DEER (CP) — A 33-year-old man in custody at Great Falls, Mont., is to be questioned in the death of Jacqueline Virginia Gray, 23, whose body was found Aug. 15 in Sylvan Lake, RCMP said Thursday.

The man in custody was known to have been in the Sylvan Lake area when Miss Gray, a student at the University of Calgary, died about three weeks ago. Police said Miss Gray was an apparent drowning victim, but added they do not rule out foul play.

Man. PCs Split

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rival factions within the Manitoba Progressive Conservative Party have still not agreed on procedures for preventing each other from "packing" the party's leadership convention in December.

Supporters of Sidney Spivak, the 45-year-old incumbent leader, and Sterling Lyon, a 48-year-old lawyer seeking to take over the party reins, failed Thursday in the latest in a series of attempts to establish ground rules for the creation of new women's and youth groups.

AUGUST MARTIANS RIGHT ON SCHEDULE

REGINA (CP) — "It's just our usual August invasion of Martians," aviation briefer John Mulvenna said when asked about reports of unidentified flying objects in Regina skies Wednesday night.

Six residents reported yellow-white round objects moving through the skies, but Mulvenna attributed the sightings to cloud formations.

A heavy mat of scattered clouds was moving faster than usual and in such a way as to make it appear as if the stars were also moving, he said.

He added that the number of unidentified-flying-object reports always jumps each summer as warm nights induce people out of their houses to cool off.

$2M Taxes Sought

REGINA (CP) — Tax assessment notices handed to Royal American Shows Inc. of Tampa, Fla., and eight independent concession operators travelling with the carnival total more than $2 million, according to documents filed at the provincial courthouse.

The federal government is seeking $1.7 million in tax payments in addition to the $452,557 claimed by provincial tax officials.

Couple Killed

LAURA, Sask. (CP) — Ralph Douglas Davidson of Vancouver and an unidentified woman were killed Wednesday on Highway 7 near here when their car left the road and rolled over.

Take Us Seriously: Indians

EDMONTON (CP) — While Alberta native leaders agree their relations with RCMP are good, they say unrest will grow unless they are taken more seriously by government.

Harold Cardinal, president of the Indian Association of Alberta said Thursday Indian protest will grow louder unless "harassment" from department of Indian affairs officials ends.

Stan Daniels, president of the Metis Association of Alberta, said he hopes the RCMP report that warned Canadians about native militancy will encourage government to speed up negotiations and land settlements with native people.

Assistant Commissioner E. R. Lysyk, RCMP commanding officer of K Division, said Wednesday the situation in Alberta was far different than conditions described in the report. A press release said Lysyk felt "rapport between native groups and RCMP in Alberta has been very good."

The K Division, which covers the province, had no input into the report, said Lysyk. "Frankly, I'm quite upset that it be applied as an over-all, sweeping statement."

Cardinal agreed relations were good and questioned whether the leaking of the report was an attempt to sway public opinion against native people.

He did say native people are getting "fed up" with "arrogant" attitudes of Indian affairs officials, but did not give details.

Victorian Pays Three, But They Want Jobs

Community newspaper publisher John Damgaard said today he is paying three employees who were ordered reinstated by the Labor Relations Board and are still waiting to be given work.

The three—Richard L. Groenheyde, Susan MacKenzie and Terry Wickstrom—are among pickets who appeared in front of the Victorian premises on Government Street Thursday morning protesting unfair labor practices.

When asked if paying the three reflects his interpretation of the LRB order to reinstate the employees who were fired a year ago, Damgaard refused to discuss the matter further.

Local 226 of the International Typographical Union, of which the three are members, has been trying to get a first contract with the Victorian and claims the trio is illegally locked out. Pickets are carrying ITU placards and are on duty again today.

For a short time Thursday afternoon, they were joined by several non-union employees of the paper, whose placards alleged the ITU was "tearing down what we've built up."

Damgaard said today it was "a very involved story." Addressing the reporter, he said, "It is no reflection on your part, but as long as Victoria Press pickets are walking in front of my paper, I'm not going to talk to Victoria Press reporters."

ITU Local 226 President Ed Fairbairn was one of the pickets this morning. He said it is quite legal for persons not directly involved to picket on behalf of another party.

"Anyone has the authority to picket on your behalf — it could be an old age pensioner," Fairbairn said.

"Actually, we have volunteers from CUPE (Canadian Union of Public Employees), the Queen's Printer, Post Office Workers, and most unions affiliated with the Labor Council will be asked to participate."

Fairbairn said the ITU is asking other unions to boycott the paper and may ask for a boycott of advertisers.

Part of the LRB order directed the Victorian to cease intimidation or coercion which could dissuade a person from becoming a member of a trade union.

The language used in the reinstatement order refers specifically to "reinstating ... to employment," and orders the three be given back pay owed by reason of their discharge or accrued until their reinstatement to employment.

Fairbairn said picketing will continue but he did not indicate what further action is considered by the ITU.

Schools Appoint Long-Term Planner

Dr. John Wiens, assistant superintendent of schools for Greater Victoria School District, has been put in charge of long-range planning for the district.

The school board approved Wiens' new role and two other minor administration shuffles at a special board meeting Thursday.

Wiens will be looking after long-term planning of education programs, future needs of alternative schools and community programs, and will be in charge of senior staff development.

Jack Dalgleish, now associate director of business, will work under Wiens as associate director of planning.

Art Lamrock, assistant director of pupil services and research, will also work under Wiens.

Glenn Wall, assistant superintendent - administration, will no longer report to Wiens but will be completely in charge of administration.

The changes are effective immediately.

Sinai Talks Shifting Into High

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israeli reports said today indirect negotiations between Israel and Egypt on a new Sinai withdrawal pact have shifted into high gear.

One report put current chances of success as high as 70 per cent.

The Israeli press reports appeared as Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin huddled with his negotiating team for the second successive day to consider Egyptian proposals on a new accord.

The team's preliminary appraisal of the proposals, received in Tel Aviv Wednesday, was transmitted Thursday to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in Washington.

The appraisal repeated Israel's position and did not for the time being show any movement from its "final offer" delivered to Cairo last week, the newspaper Ma'Ariv said.

But the newspaper Yedioth Ahronath said "the tempo of the negotiations has gone into high gear", and "generally, there is optimism in Washington and Jerusalem, and in Jerusalem the chances for success have been estimated as up to 70 per cent."

Israeli Defence Minister Shimon Peres said Thursday the negotiations had reached their final stages and the results should be known in several weeks.

Kissinger has said he would be ready to resume his Middle East shuttle to conclude a second troop disengagement agreement once the chances for success reach 90 per cent. He mediated the first pact, which was signed in January, 1974.

Meanwhile in Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen announced Thursday that Canada will keep its troops in the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) in the Middle East for an additional three months.

Friend Feels Hoffa's Dead

Times News Services

DETROIT — David Johnson, a Teamster official who is one of James Hoffa's oldest and closest associates, said Thursday he believes the missing former head of the Teamsters' union is dead.

In an interview, Johnson, president of Hoffa's home local 299 here in Detroit, said: "I don't think that Jimmy Hoffa's alive. I'm thinking for the worst. I don't think that Jimmy Hoffa can be held in a house against his will."

Johnson also disputed reports that Hoffa had withdrawn more than $1 million from a union pension fund shortly before he mysteriously dropped out of sight last Wednesday.

"He didn't withdraw a damn thing from the pension," Johnson said. Hoffa's son, James P. also told reporters: "I know it didn't happen. I know my fathers' affairs, and it could not happen."

The younger Hoffa also vehemently denied a published report that his father might have arranged his own disappearance. He said, "It is so outrageous and stupid that anyone could say such a thing after watching the agony going on out here. The report shows a complete lack of responsibility."

Meanwhile, a cloud of suspicion has settled over Hoffa's foster son, Charles O'Brien.

A source close to the investigation said the FBI had asked that O'Brien submit to a lie-detector test to back his contention that he wasn't involved in Hoffa's disappearance.

Another source said O'Brien admitted in an FBI interview that he was in the area when Hoffa, 62, vanished and then again the next morning at about the time Hoffa's car was recovered.

O'Brien, a Teamsters' organizer who had been Hoffa's bodyguard for years, declined comment on the investigation, saying authorities had asked him to keep silent.

Before The Judge

Defrauding a bank proved a costly mistake for a 52-year-old man.

Ronald Collins pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Thursday to defrauding the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 1153 Esquimalt Rd.

Prosecutor Barry Mah Ming said Collins went to the bank Jan. 26 1974 and told the manager he was a narcotic agent working for the federal government and wished to borrow $400. The loan was authorized.

Defence lawyer Bruce McConnan told the court Collins had a job in Las Vegas and needed the money to get himself and his child there.

"He told me he sent money to a third party in Victoria with instructions to repay the bank," McConnan said. "It was an error in judgment on his part."

Collins returned to Canada from Las Vegas July 28 and was arrested at Vancouver Airport.

Judge Fred Green noted that Collins had "an unblemished record up to this date" but said the public and courts are very concerned about "white collar crimes and those who practise deceit on financial institutions."

Colllins was fined $500, placed on six months probation and ordered to pay $400 in compensation to the bank.

"Churches by tradition have never locked their doors and breaking into that kind of sanctuary is more serious (than normal)," Green told 18-year-old Daniel Howard Hunt.

Hunt, 828 Daffodil, pleaded guilty to breaking into Garden City United Church, 4052 Carey Road, Dec. 20, 1974, where he stole a $200 amplifier. He also pleaded guilty to possession of a telephone, three indoor plants, carpeting, two light dimmer switches, one roll of insulation and two wrought iron candle holders. Mah Ming said these items were taken Nov. 29 from 3948 Interurban Road.

The prosecutor entered a stay of proceedings on three other charges of break-ins and thefts alleged to have occurred between Nov. 29 and Dec. 18, 1974.

Bob Johnston, defence lawyer for Hunt, said that since the offences, Hunt has been involved with the community diversion program and is viewed by program workers as "a leading success story."

"It is quite obvious the accused has made an extremely good start toward rehabilitation," Green said, "but while the court takes into account your progress, you are not to rest on your laurels."

Green fined Hunt $150 for the church break-in and theft. On the possession charge, a suspended sentence and one-year term of probation was levied.

Alan Gay, 32, was fined $100 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

Federal drug prosecutor Malcolm McCauley said members of the drug squad raided Gay's home at 1445 Fort Tuesday and found five marijuana plants, each about 18 inches in height, a bag of marijuana and some dried marijuana leaves. McCauley added that Gay told police he grew the plants "as a lark."

"What did you mean by that remark," Green asked Gay.

"I had some seeds, planted them, and they grew," Gay replied.

"I don't buy that," Green said.

An "uninvited guest" who accompanied two other men to a Saanich home March 10, and while the resident was in the bathroom, took 11 records, was fined $250 and placed on six months probation.

Dennis Leonard Schaffer, 23, of 2091 Parkland, pleaded guilty to theft under $200.

Mah Ming told the court Schaffer had previous convictins for impaired driving and for perjury.

"You haven't got many more chances left with that record," Green said. "I'd suggest you be very careful in what you do."

Food Cost, Gas Tax Push July Prices Up

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Food prices rose 2.3 per cent in July accounting for half of the consumer price index rise of 1.4 per cent in the month.

Another major factor in the index leap was the special 10-cents-a-gallon excise tax on gasoline for private use announced in the June 23 budget. Statistics Canada said this tax measure was responsible for about one-third of the July rise in the cost of living.

The increase in the food component of the index during the past 12 months, including July, was 14.8 per cent, well ahead of the over-all index rise of 11 per cent in the period.

July's index rise of 1.4 per cent was only fractionally less than the 1.5 per cent increase for June which ended a relatively low monthly increase that started in January.

The only major component of the index which declined during July was clothing; it was down only one-tenth of one per cent. Transportation was up 2.5 per cent and costs for recreation and education rose 1.5 per cent.

The consumer price index in July was at 186.5. Stated another way, this means that a basket of consumer goods that could be bought for $100 in 1961 cost $186.50 last month. The same basket cost $184 in June and $168 a year ago.

The purchasing power of a 1961 dollar had dropped to 54 cents by July.

The index is based on a 1967 survey of family spending patterns and weights of major component indexes are: Food, 25 per cent; housing, 31 per cent; clothing, 11 per cent; transportation, 15 per cent, and other items, 18 per cent.

Still to be reflected in the index is the effect of higher domestic crude oil prices that also were announced in the June 23 budget. This will add another five cents a gallon to prices for gasoline and other fuels later this month.

The Food Prices Review Board is predicting further increases in food prices later this year, although some of the food price rise in the July index was due to seasonal influences. The July index is based on a survey done in the first week of July, too early for many types of fresh produce to be on the market.

However, meat prices are expected to continue to rise and government restrictions on egg imports are pushing domestic prices higher.

Commenting on rising prices Thursday, Prime Minister Trudeau said "inflation remains a very stark reality in Canada."

He renewed the government's battle cry of several months ago, adding: "It's something we must solve. We'll all go down the drain if we price ourselves out of world markets."

Trudeau said he had no new anti-inflation initiates to announce but said: "Of course we are worried about inflation."

He conceded the government's consensus program was "not as successful as it might have been" but said he was encouraged by a slowdown in the rate of inflation in recent months.

Crime Law 'Package' In Fall

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Capital punishment legislation will be introduced in Parliament this fall as part of a "package" of criminal code amendments, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Thursday.

His statement appeared to support the suspicions of some Conservative MPs that the highly emotional issue of whether to abolish the death penalty entirely will be tied up with other measures such as prison reform, parole and gun control.

Both Solicitor General Warren Allmand and Justice Minister Otto Lang during the session which ended July 30 avoided saying directly whether the government would lump capital punishment in with stricter measures to ensure public safety in an effort to get more support from MPs for total abolition. But Trudeau on Thursday was not as careful.

"It is our plan in the fall to bring in a package on this whole area of gun control, criminal control, prison reforms, capital punishment," he stated.

Tsitika Log Ban Lifted

A logging moratorium imposed last year on the Tsitika-Schoen area of Vancouver Island has been partially lifted by the provincial government.

About 168,000 acres or half the area has been released for logging while the remaining acreage is still being reserved for further study by the government's environment and land use committee.

The logging ban was applied earlier this year while the government studied a proposal to establish an ecological reserve and a provincial park in the Tsitika River-Schoen Lake area northwest of Campbell River, near Sayward.

Residents of the Sayward area complained and petitioned the government when the ban was imposed saying establishment of a park would curtail logging and force over 200 loggers out of work.

Resources Minister Bob Williams said the lifting of the moratorium was allowed in areas where there was a general consensus that carefully planned timber extraction was appropriate.

In this way, he said, employment opportunities will be maintained and the committee can still fully consider making different land use decisions in the areas still reserved from logging.

All logging in the 168,000 acres will be subject to plans approved by the forest service and fish and wildlife branch.

"There was some concern expressed at the public meetings (held in the area earlier this year) regarding the future of the Sayward-Woss link of the northern Vancouver Island highway," said Williams.

"The committee wants to affirm that clearing of the necessary right of way is approved and that development of this highway is proceeding in accordance with approved plans."

The minister said involvement of numerous groups in the area during the committee's work was "most important and useful . . . and is a process that will doubtless be

SHRINKING SUGAR cubes are a sign of the times and that traditional tea-time question: "one lump or two?" may become "two lumps or three?" With lengthy strike at B.C. Saltspring Gas Users Cut Off

The lockout of Teamster union members who drive propane delivery trucks has depleted propane supplies in the Greater Victoria area and many residential users on Saltspring Island have been cut off completely.

The lockout of 300 Teamster drivers by Transport Labor Relations has shut down the three main propane suppliers on Vancouver Island — Cigas Products, Northwest Propane and Vancouver Island Gas.

The lockout is now in its third week and a Teamster spokesman said Thursday no further negotiation meetings have been scheduled.

The lockout has completely depleted the supplies of Gulf Island Propane, the main supplier on Saltspring Island.

Owner Bob Blundell said Thursday he has had to cut off all hs customers who use propane for stoves and hot water heaters.

He said many of his customers have hooked up hot plates or electric stoves to cook on.

Blundell, who normally gets his propane supplies from Vancouver Island Gas, said management personnel in that company have been delivering some propane for use in the Lady Minto hospital which runs partially on propane.

"They have to bring that over because it's an essential service, but even then we don't always have enough to give them as much as they want," he said.

The lockout has hit in the middle of the peak propane demand time for recreational vehicles and has left holidayers searching around for supplies.

R. L. Fennell, manager of Fennell's Trailer Supplies on the Pat Bay Highway said he has enough propane to last for has enough propane to last for another three or four weeks.

Fennell has a 1,000-gallon tank and so has not been hit as hard as some suppliers who have smaller tanks. His main business is supplying bottled propane for recreational vehicles.

Wells O'Weary Propane on West Coast Road supplies both recreational vehicles and residential users. A spokesman said today the company has enough propane to last about one more week.

Negotiations between the Transport Labor Relations and three Teamster locals began in March for a contract to replace tre one which expired April 30.

Carl Anshelm, president of Transport Labor Relations, said the lockout action was taken because "there has not been one meaningful set of negotiations since they started."

Pilots Threaten One-Day Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Airline Pilots Association decided Thursday to halt all flight operations in Canada for 24 hours beginning at midnight Oct. 17, unless the federal government ends experiments in bilingual traffic control.

Ken Maley, president of the CALPA, announced the decision at a news conference here and said the association's board of directors has also decided that "if at any time, the government implements the recommendations of the Bilcom report on the use of French in air traffic services, (the 2,700-member CALPA) will cease all flight operations until such measures are withdrawn."

Air traffic controllers may support the threatened walk-out in October if the transport department does not soon restrict licences of unilingual Francophone pilots, Jim Livingstone, president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said today.

"Of course a decision on what action would be taken would depend on what the board of directors decided," he said in an interview.

The bilingual communication report has recommended that the use of French be permitted beyond the five Quebec airports where it now is being used experimentally.

Maley said the decision has the unanimous support of the organization's member pilots.

He said the decision also has the support of the International Pilots Federation because the group has endorsed English as the only language for use on international flights.

The CALPA president said a flight stoppage would include all domestic and international flights in and out of Canada, and if the Bilcom report were implemented, the stoppage would continue until the issue was resolved.

The text of the resolution has been transmitted to the office of Transport minister Jean Marchand.

But Marchand's aides would not comment on the CALPA plans.

A spokesman for the minister said deputy transport minister Sylvain Cloutier is to discuss the situation with transport department air officials later today. A further statement may be made after the meeting, he said. Marchand is on holidays, out of the country.

Pulp Worker Pickets Close BCFP in City

Striking pulp workers set up a picket line around the B.C. Forest Products operation on Gorge Road Thursday, closing down the plant and throwing about 600 International Woodworkers of America members out of work.

The picket line, composed of striking members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada union from the Crofton local, appeared at the operation at 4 p.m.

IWA members reporting for the 4:30 p.m. shift honored the picket line and both the plywood and sawmill divisions have been closed down since.

The line is part of an escalation of picketing activities by the PPWC all over B.C.

Jack Groves, vice-president of the Victoria IWA local, said today IWA members at B.C. Forest Products are "disturbed that they (the PPWC) can't justify their actions."

"We have only three days to go until the mediator (Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon) brings down his report. All they're doing is losing us money," Groves said.

"The mediator is beyond any pressure or persuasion from groups of this nature."

Groves said the IWA had agreed at the time the mediator was appointed to put off any strike action until he brought in his report. ("That report comes Tuesday and we want our people to have as much money in their pockets as possible," he said.

The IWA members are honoring, but not participating in, the picket line at B.C. Forest Products, he said.

The PPWC also set up a picket line at the B.C. Forest Products sawmill division at Youbou early today, Jack Mumm of the Duncan IWA said today.

Mumm said IWA production workers at the mill had already been laid off because the mill had earlier shut down for three weeks because of slumping lumber markets, but the picket line today did prevent between 25 and 30

LISBON (UPI) — Portugal's three ruling generals today created a new left-wing cabinet which pledged a policy of tough repression against its foes.

Within hours a wave of anti-Communist violence swept a half-dozen towns.

President Francisco da Costa Gomes swore in a cabinet that retained pro-Communist Gen. Vasco Goncalves, the main target of dissent, as premier.

Goncalves recently threatened to turn Lisbon's bullring into a concentration camp for political opponents and he reaffirmed today his tough stand against his opponents.

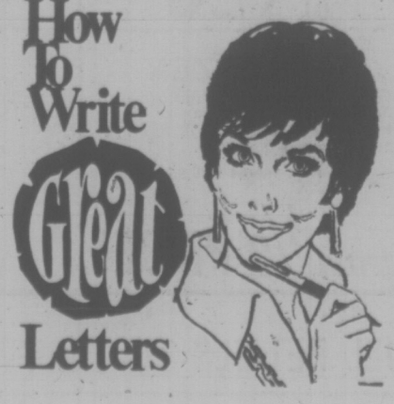
Modern Secretary . . . Demeaning?



By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

The B.C. Human Rights Commission has taken aim at Modern Secretary magazine, calling it patronizing and demeaning.

Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo, "chairperson" of the five-member commission, has written Monk Office Supply at 754 Broughton asking the company to stop sending the magazine to provincial government offices.

"The Human Rights Code of British Columbia is based on the recognition of the dignity of all persons," said De Roo in the letter.

"Magazines such as this one do not reflect the capabilities and intelligence of women, and as such is contrary to the spirit of the Human Rights Code."

People in clerical positions could use a magazine that more closely reflects their interests and capabilities, said the letter.

"The magazine's been very, very popular," Monk Office Supply president Ron McKenzie said Thursday.

Published in Florida, Modern Secretary is distributed monthly by Monk to offices around the city.

A few years ago only 250 copies of the free magazine were being distributed, McKenzie said, but now close to 800 are sent out each month.

"We get 10 to 15 calls each month asking for additional copies," he said.

Nearly 250 of the issues go to government offices, almost all of them to people who didn't ask to receive it, he said. The magazine is simply sent to government offices where they are distributed by the mail room.

McKenzie said he can remember only two complaints about the magazine, one from a women at the University of Victoria and another, more

BLAZE RIPS FRUIT PLANT

'OSOYOOS (CP) — An early-morning blaze Thursday destroyed a $600,000 fruit storage plant owned by the Oliver-Osoyoos Co-Operative Growers' Association.

A bulk oil station and several homes nearby were not harmed by the fire that raised the old warehouse within two hours. Cause of the blaze was being investigated.

Bill Dell, manager of the Co-Op, said the fire did not create an urgent problem because the firm's expansion of its plant at Oliver is on schedule and would be ready for the fall.

There was no fruit in the warehouse at the time of the fire since it mainly is used for the fall apple harvest and contained only cardboard packing cartons, he added.

Modest Decline At Toronto

Prices at Toronto settled into a modest decline in light mid-afternoon trading today.

Activity was slow with 743,000 shares traded by 2 p.m., down from 760,000 at the same time Thursday.

Declines outnumbered advances 159 to 138 with 203 issues unchanged.

Trading resumed in Western supplies A at the opening following a five-session halt. The chairman and president of the company said they have rejected a $40-a-share offer by Inter-City Gas Ltd. for their 35-per-cent interest in the company. Western Supplies A had not traded by 2 p.m. and last closed at $25. Inter-City fell 15 cents to $4.40

Trading was halted at the opening in Canada Machinery Corp. pending an announcement. Canada Machinery last traded Dec. 31, 1971 at $29.

Vulcan Industrial Packaging dropped ¾ to $12½. Bushnell Communications 65 cents to $4.35, Peoples Department Stores ½ to $6⅛ and Eastern Canada Savings ½ to $11¾.

Dome Pete gained ⅝ to $28¾. Automotive Hardware A ½ to $12½, Dominion Stores ½ to $17¼ and Toronto Dominion Bank ⅜ to $43⅜.

Losses among mines included Camflo, down ¼ to $13½, Kerr Addison A ¼ to $12½, and United Keno Hill ⅛ to $12⅛. Cyprus Anvil rose ¼ to $9¼ and Madeleine 21 cents to $2.52.

Among oils, Total Pete lost ¼ to $6⅝ and Skye Resources 17 cents to $2.05 while Canadian Merrill gained ½ to $5¾.

New York

The market was widely mixed Friday, wavering between conflicting economic news.

Losers outpaced gainers by about a 7-to-5 margin in light trading at New York.

Analysts noted some hopes for an easing off in upward pressure on interest rates, based on the virtually leveling off in the money supply for July shown in Federal Reserve Board figures issued late thursday.

But the effects of the recent rise in open market money rates continued to make themselves felt, with New York's First National City Bank raising its prime lending rate to 7¾ from 7½ per cent.

Brokers also noted that the market's worries over inflation were underscored when U.S. Steel announced price increases averaging 3.8 per cent. A couple of other large steel producers had posted larger increases earlier in the week.

U.S. Steel shares rose ⅞ to $62⅞.

International Minerals and Chemicals, which reported sharply higher quarterly earnings, picked up a point to $37½ in active trading.

Anaconda jumped 2⅝ to $17¾. Crane Co. said it planned an exchange offer for 23 per cent of Anaconda's stock.

Montreal

Prices were mixed in moderate trading today at Montreal.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. EDT was 254,300 shares, compared with 263,100 shares traded up to the same time Thursday.

Pacific Petroleum was off ¼ to $21¾, Noranda A ¼ to $35¾, Ivaco A ¼ to $10, Imperial bank of Commerce ⅛ to 25¼, Northern Electic ⅛ to $30¼ and Imperial Oil A ⅛ to $26⅝.

His Career Spent Under the Weather

By PAT DUFOUR

Victoria loses its weatherman on Wednesday.

That's the last working day for Allan McQuarrie, officer in charge of the Victoria weather office at the Victoria International Airport.

It ends 34½ years of service with what is now known as the federal government's Atmospheric Environment Service.

In the years he's headed the nine-man Victoria office, McQuarrie has kept his finger on the pulse of everything that happens in this area.

As he puts it, "Weather affects everything."

The thousands of phone calls answered by his office run the gamut from a forest ranger at Langford, anxious to know the projected wind direction and strength in order to decide whether to bring in water bombers to fight a fire, to an enquiry from a person planning to do some downtown shopping.

"I'll always remember one caller who wanted some pretty specific details. It was from a lady wanting to know what kind of hat to wear," McQuarrie recalls.

From April, 1974 to April of this year, McQuarrie's office handled 192,078 requests for weather information, processing 76 weather charts (covering the entire northern hemisphere) each day and receiving reports from 500 B.C. stations daily.

In the years he's been in the service, McQuarrie says computers and satellites have been the biggest breakthrough in producing massive amounts of data.

Weather charts are now both drawn and plotted by computers.

McQuarrie says the Victoria office has earned a place of respect well outside B.C. borders.

"We get long-distance calls from people planning to fly their executive jets, say, from New Jersey to San Francisco, because they believe our service to be superior to theirs," he said.

Himself a sailor, McQuarrie and his staff are well-known to yachtsmen for the briefings his office provides for those competing in the Victoria-Maui and Swiftsure races.

McQuarrie would like to see more of the boating public use the service the Victoria office can provide.

Born in Edson, Alberta, McQuarrie has held a variety of positions in the service. He is an honorary life director of the Calgary Flying Club, fellow of the Royal Meteorological Society and a member of the Canadian Meteorological Society.

Almost as well-known in photographic circles, McQuarrie is a director of the Color Photographic Association of Canada.

A retirement dinner is being planned by his friends and colleagues and will take place at 6:30 p.m. in the Sidney Travelodge on Friday, Aug. 29.

Stepping down, McQuarrie foresees no major advances in his profession in the years ahead.

He does, however, see far greater us of the service.

"In the early days aviation was a high hazard business," he said, "And concentration had to be made on providing information for that field. Now the hazard has gone out of flying.

"I would like to see fishing, agriculture and forestry and other areas making fuller use of our facilities."

McQuarrie . . . retires after 34½ years

By PAUL MOSS

In their quest for water the thirsty Saanich Peninsula municipalities appear ready to splurge $10,000 on an odds-on-bet which could reap winnings, in the form of long-term expenditure savings, of at least 1,000 times that figure.

There were clear indications of the municipal politicians' betting mood at a public meeting in Central Saanich municipal hall on Thursday, even though many of the peninsula farmers present seemed to think the risks not worth taking.

For the $10,000 outlay, the municipalities of Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney would get a Vancouver firm's expert appraisal of the peninsula's groundwater potential — its ability to supply the area's water needs from a system of deep wells for at least the next 10 years.

And if, as the firm's spokesman told Thursday's meeting, that potential is found to be as good as they believe, up to six million gallons of water a day could be pumped from water-containing fissures as deep as 1,000 feet.

Bill Brown, of the geotechnical consultants Piteau Gadsby MacLeod Ltd., said that would be enough water for 100,000 people, about five times the peninsula's present population.

He estimated the approximate cost of tapping this subterranean water source, including well drilling, monitoring and construction of a distribution system, would be about $500,000.

By contrast, piping surface water up the peninsula from the Greater Victoria water system would cost at least $10 million.

Included in the report which the Vancouver firm has offered to prepare would be a complementary study by a civil engineering firm, Sir William Halcrow and Partners, on the bulk distribution system needed to bring the groundwater to peninsula consumers.

Following the meeting Central Saanich Ald. David Hill, who is chairman of the Peninsula Water Committee made up of all municipalities and water utilities in the area, said he is confident that there will be municipal support authorizing the study by the two companies.

Even if that backing isn't forthcoming from North Saanich and Sidney, he said, he will recommend that Central Saanich go it alone in commissioning the report.

Brown told the meeting that aerial photographs of the Greater Victoria area show a "whole vast system" of interconnecting fracture zones which cut through the bedrock.

It is this network of fracture zones, stretching all the way from Sooke Lake (possibly including the Malahat) and up the peninsula which contains huge quantities of groundwater.

If the studies show it to be necessary, he said, the wells could be so designated that they could be "recharged" by surface water piped from Elk Lake during the winter months, when there is excess water from the lake available to the peninsula.

This would build up reserves of water ready for intensive irrigation during the dry summer periods, when peninsula water consumption is about eight times heavier than winter use. Surface reservoirs could also be constructed to supplement storage capacity.

Brown tried to allay fears that if a complex of municipal wells were developed, producing several million gallons of water per day, it would drain water from existing shallow wells on the peninsula.

He said, the latter are generally in the unconsolidated sands and gravels overlaying the bedrock, and "we know from experience" that this shallow aquifer or water-bearing zone is not directly connected to the deeper fracture zones.

To prevent any siphoning effect from one to the other the well shafts could be sealed, he explained. But under questioning from the skeptical peninsula farmers, Brown admitted that this safeguard would not be foolproof if there were "windows" or interconnecting openings between the shallow and deeper layers.

In reply to one farmer who sought a guarantee that "you are not going to drain us dry," he said such questions would form an essential part of the study.

Asked how much "lead time" or warning period there might be in the event that municipal wells were petering out, brown said through proper monitoring there should be at least a five-year warning. "Wells don't dry up overnight," he added.

J. E. Bosher, chairman of the Sidney Water Works District, said Brown's firm had located 10 wells for the utility, and although three had proved too high in chloride content only one of the 10 was an actual failure.

"That was a pretty good average," he commented.

Bosher said the peninsula's only alternative, hooking up to the Greater Victoria system, would be unrealistically expensive, whereas "if we all combine we can afford it" (an exploration and drilling program for groundwater).

"Let's give it a try," he urged.

Elk Lake Weed Feed For Victoria Gardens

Greater Victoria residents will soon be able to use weeds from Elk Lake to feed their garden patches.

Dr. Bob Langford, who is heading a project designed to rid Saanich lakes of weed problems, reports collected weeds will be made available to the public starting next Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., every day except Saturdays and Sundays.

The weeds will be in a box situated near the concession at Beaver Lake.

The Irish have been using seaweed for centuries to nurture vegetable gardens.

Langford said the weeds should be left to dry for a few days and then used as a mulch.

"You rotortill them in and they really break up clay," he said. "You end up with fine loam after two or three years."

Part of Langford's project, which he is carrying out for the Environmental Centre of Greater Victoria with the cooperation of Saanich's parks department, is to establish the economic feasibility of composting lake weeds.

Langford, who is also a consultant for Saanich's program of restoring the municipality's waterways, has had the parks department build three special compost boxes.

In one sawdust is being added, in another hay is being used and fertilizer is being added to the third one.

"The problem is that the weeds have too much water which impedes bacterial activity," Langford said. "We are trying different methods to see what can be done."

He estimated it would take two weeks to reduce the weeds to compost.

Langford said he would be making recommendations at the end of the summer which could result in a much more efficient method of ridding lakes of weeds.

"I will probably recommend a different type of cutting machine which not only cuts but pulls the weeds onto a platform where most of the water is squeezed out," he said.

Langford said if an efficient weed-garnering program is initiated it should be done by the Capital Regional District because Langford Lake and others in the regional district are affected as well as Saanich's Prospect, Elk and Beaver Lakes.

He estimated the cost of the machine he recommends at $80,000.

Langford suggested the cost of composing the weeds could be underwritten by charging a nominal fee, perhaps 25 cents, for each bag.

Murder Attempt Charge Dropped

A charge of attempted murder, laid against James Ronald Page, was dismissed by Judge William Ostler following completion Thursday of the preliminary hearing in Victoria provincial court.

Ostler said there was not enough evidence to commit Page to a higher court for trial before judge and jury.

Instead, the judge ordered a higher court trial on a reduced two-count charge of causing bodily harm to Philip Brennan, 29, and possession of a weapon for a purpose dangerous to public peace.

Page, 27, of 476 Dupplin, had been originally charged May 15 with attempted murder following a shooting incident earlier that day in which Brennan suffered a single wound.

At the end of the hearing Thursday, Ostler released Brennan and two other prosecution witnesses on their own recognizance pending trial in the fall. The bonds were $300 for Brennan, $1,000 for David Bennett and $250 for Janice Brown.

Warrants had been issued by Ostler for the arrest of the three when they failed to appear at the hearing last Thursday despite being served subpoenas.

ASK THE TIMES

Q—For years we were told that lanolin softened the skin and benefitted the hair and scalp. Now I find that creams and shampoos are not made with lanolin. I was told this in two shops today. Can you tell me why? H.M.C.

A—The pharmacist in a leading Victoria store suggests you are misinformed. Lanolin continues to be used commonly as a cosmetic ingredient, valued for its softening qualities. But a number of products which made the most of advertising their lanolin content during a vogue in recent years have since gone off the market.

PROPHETIC SIGN on Oak Bay Junction apartment block might lead one to believe it will self-destruct or crumble under the wrecking ball but in fact, marquee's days are marked only because city bylaw prohibiting third-party advertising signs and billboards becomes effective Aug. 24.

Leave Parkland, Council Urged

Parkland should not be developed to provide a recreation centre for senior citizens, Victoria's parks committee agreed Thursday.

The committee urged council to ignore an earlier proposal that part of a small park at Michigan and Menzies be used for construction of a centre for the James Bay New Horizons group.

Instead, it suggests the city consider purchasing privately owned property near the park, which has a single-family home on the site. The money would come from the Neighborhood Improvement Program funding for James Bay.

Council has been divided on the parkland development issue in recent weeks, with some members claiming the site was the only suitable one by virtue of its central location, while others strongly opposed the principle of permitting any development on parkland.

At Thursday's meeting Ald. Bob Ellis again spoke out against erosion of parks for any purpose. He noted that even if a building were permitted in the James Bay Park, it might prove inadequate for the association's use in a few years and then there would be pressure to develop adjoining land.

In other business, the committee recommended that the city agree to bargain with the Capital Regional District on the transfer of the city-owned Durrance Lake, in the Highlands, to regional jurisdiction.

But aldermen stressed that they are not prepared to consider transfer of the park property for a "nominal" price. The figure must be a realistic one, although instead of cash the city would accept a cash "credit."

Under this proposal, the agreed value of the city property would be "banked" by the region, representing the city's share of any future regional parkland acquisitions.

Committee members didn't seem to hold out much hope of reaching agreement, however.

Mayor Peter Pollen noted that a similar proposal, for the transfer of the city's Thetis Lake Park to the regional parks system, has been "wallowing around" in inconclusive argument for at least four years.

Putting the Stretch on a Skinny Buck

WHAT WITH INFLATION, recession, strikes and layoffs, the times are tough and getting tougher. The shrunken Canadian dollar not only buys less but is harder to come by. This is a sorry state of affairs. It also presents a challenge that can't be met by crying in your beer—provided you can afford beer at today's inflated prices.

The challenge is to make one dollar do the work of two or more.

This isn't easy. Sometimes it hurts. But as a freelance couple rarely sure when the next cheque is going to arrive, Win and I have developed an elastic approach to our personal economy.

In our fatcat spells, we can spend like crazy. But we have learned to get full mileage from a dollar when our finances threaten to bottom out.

I'm not boasting about that last accomplishment. Any couple or individual confronted by the need to economize can do the same. Old-age pensioners and others on fixed incomes are committed to dollar-stretching as a matter of harsh necessity every day of the year.

If you find it essential to do likewise, commence by adopting a proper down-to-earth attitude. The struggle for survival ha sno place for false pride of the sort that puts a premium on keeping up with the Joneses, but it does demand a certain hard-shell arrogance.

You are going to cut down, substitute, put off and do without in the healthy conviction that slashing your outgo make ssense. And you should realize that the relative who criticizes or the friend who offers sympathy may very well be envying your ability to tighten your belt at need.

The three basic areas on which you'll concentrate your efforts to conserve are shelter, fuel and food.

Shelter first. If you're a householder, do what you can to keep your place up, with particular attention to weather-stripping and insulation. It won't be long until your furnace is humming its cool-weather tune once more, and a house that bleeds heat is no aid to economy.

Take care of larger repairs that can't be avoided. Ignored, a roof leak can ruin a ceiling when the rains come. Otherwise, shelve home improvements that cost bucks until a more propitious time.

Whether you live in a house or an apartment, don't move except for the most solid of reasons — a good job guaranteed elsewhere, or a spectacularly better rent or mortgage deal. Moving not only costs. With it go a troop of related expenses that rear their heads when you've made the shift.

Fuel means warmth. Fuel costs. Even here on Canada's sundeck, we can't escape fuel bills. An inefficiently-functioning furnace can hike those bills. A lower thermostat setting supplemented by a light sweater will help reduce them. The householder with a free-standing fireplace or a built-in one that is more than a living-room ornament can whittle the high cost of heating still further by rustling his own wood.

The place to find firewood is on any accessible beach along these Island shores. You don't need a saw or even an axe to garner it. Forget about the logs. The area beachcomber has first claim on those under the terms of his licence. Concentrate on the small stuff; the chunky fir knots, the cedar fragments that make excellent kindling, the nuggets of Douglas fir bark that burn almost like coal.

Load your car trunk with this concentrated heat. But since car fuel also costs like the very devil, stretch it by combining your wood-foraging with other errands. We came home from our last car ramble with a load of bark, wild blackberries, and a batch of bargain corn sold over the tailgate of a parked truck.

This brings us to the important matter of how to eat for less, which I propose to tackle in detail next week. Enough for the moment that it can be done, and that the quality of your meals needn't be downgraded.

What I'm passing on here won't achieve miracles of saving for you. From our experience, however, I can assure you that small practical economies will make dollars last longer.

I haven't touched on entertainment or clothing because these items, with one exception, don't figure in a hard times budget. Make your own entertainment. Unless your butt is showing through the patches, wear what you've got.

The exception: even if you have to compensate by cutting down elsewhere, bolster your morale once in a while by permitting yourself a treat. Not an expensive one. The restaurant lunch we staked ourselves to when our roller-coaster economy was at lowest drag left change from a five.

But it gave our day a needed boost, and made the world seem brighter.

Skipper Turns 84 In Hospital Bed

Freeman "Skipper" King is 84 today — but he's celebrating his birthday in hospital.

King, a self-taught naturalist who has guided thousands of children in local nature rambles over many years, has undergone surgery and is reported in satisfactory condition at Victoria eGneral Hospital. He was admitted to hospital with an unspecified problem eight days ago.

Lean and leathery, King retired from his job as Goldstream provincial park naturalist in April this year but continued active in the field, as a volunteer naturalist at Thomas Francis Park.

He continues as a Times columnist as well, his weekly Nature Rambles interrupted only by his current illness.

He has been as well a Boy Scout commissioner for over four decades and in 1972 was made a freeman of Saanich, only the third to receive that honor.

Mail Plant Model Unveiled

Only 10 people turned up Thursday night for an informational meeting in Royal Oak about the Post Office's $8 million mail handling plant to be built in that area.

The meeting was called by the federal post office and public works departments to show residents the model of the 123,000 square foot building which will be constructed on a 12-acre site between Glanford and the Pat Bay Highway in Saanich.

Construction is slated to begin on the building in late August or September, but landscaping of the grounds will start immediately, a post office spokesman said.

The one-storey building, with terraced administration offices at the front of the complex, will house the new mechanized sorting equipment which will handle the majority of standard letter-type mail.

A post office spokesman said the Victoria office now handles about 400,000 pieces of mail per day, but studies show that it will have to be able to handle more than one million pieces a day by 1980.

Staff now working in the downtown post office on mail processing will move to the new office when it is completed in late 1976. Counter clerks and mail delivery employees will continue to work at their current locations.

One of the features of the complex is an outdoor exercise track and an indoor recreation area for employees.

DIANA ROSS and pop music superstar Elton John co-host the first annual Rock Music Awards show, to be telecast live on Saturday at 10 p.m. on Channel 7 and 12. Performances by rock, rhythm and blues, and pop stars will alternate with awards presentations. Some of the personalities include Cher, Alice Cooper, Olivia Newton-John, Raquel Welch, the Kiki Dee Band, Labelle and Chuck Berry.

Movies

Jitterbugs, on 4 at 1 p.m. Comedy nostalgia fans will enjoy this 1943 Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy movie, about a pair of carnival musicians who foil the plans of a group of con artists. Vivian Blaine co-stars.

Stowaway (xxx), on 11 at 2. One of the better Shirley Temple musicals, this one made in 1936, about a slain missionary's daughter who stows away on a playboy's yacht. Supporting cast includes Robert Young and Alice Faye.

Looking for Love (xx), on 5 at 2:30. A routine 1964 musical romance starring Connie Francis and Jim Hutton.

The Over-the-Hill Gang (xx), on 7 at 6:30. A good cast of western character actors (Walter Brennan, Edgar Buchanan, Chill Wills, Andy Devine, Jack Elam and Pat O'Brien) highlight this 1969 spoof of cowboy movies.

Ice Station Zebra (xxx), on 4 at 8. Rock Hudson, Ernest Borgnine, Patrick McGoohan and Lloyd Nolan star in this overlong (3 hrs.) but interesting 1968 Cold War adventure about a nuclear submarine on a secret mission to the North Pole.

BIBI ANDERSSON
. . . on 5 at 11:40 p.m.

FRANK SINATRA
. . . on 6 at 1:45 a.m.

The Arrangement (xx), on 8 at 8:30, 5 at 9 and 6 at 11:15. An uneven 1968 film rendering of Elia Kazan's thinly veiled autobiographical best-seller about the search for meaning in his life as portrayed by a dissatisfied ad executive with a loveless marriage and a demanding mistress. A good cast (Kirk Douglas, Deborah Kerr and Faye Dunaway) is wasted with the exception of Richard Boone, who is excellent as Douglas' Greek immigrant father.

Frontier Horizon (xx), on 11 at 11. Routine 1939 John Wayne western.

Generation (xxx), on 7 at 11:30. A familiar cast of television faces (David Janssen, Kim Darby, Carl Reiner, Pete Duel and Andrew Prine) star in this 1969 comedy-drama about a strait-laced advertising executive trying to understand and accept his daughter's anti-Establishment marriage.

Above and Beyond (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. Robert Taylor, Eleanor Parker and James Whitmore star in this interesting 1952 drama that tells the story of Col. Paul Tibbetts, pilot of the plane that dropped the atom bomb on Hiroshima in 1945. Taylor gives a fine performance as the conscience-stricken Tibbetts, and he gets good support from Miss Parker as his wife.

The Kremlin Letter (xx), on 5 at 11:40. John Huston directed (and plays a small role) this confusing 1970 movie rendering of Noel Behn's best-selling espionage novel about Western intelligence agents involved in Russian cold war intrigue. Cast includes Richard Boone, Patrick O'Neal, Bibi Andersson, Orson Welles and Max Von Sydow.

Paint Your Wagon (xx), on 8 at midnight. Offbeat casting (Lee Marvin, Jean Seberg and Clint Eastwood) detracts from this 1969 musical adapted from the Lerner-Loewe Broadway hit about the gold-rush days in the old West.

The Detective (xxx), on 6 at 1:45. Frank Sinatra, Lee Remick and Jack Klugman head an excellent cast in this well above-average 1968 crime-drama, about a hard-bitten New York City police detective investigating a messy murder of a young homosexual. The performances are helped by good direction and a realistic script, written by Abby Mann.

Brother John, on 8 at 3:15 a.m. No rating available on this offbeat 1971 drama starring Sidney Poitier as a mystical loner who returns to his Alabama home town at a time of racial tension. Supporting cast includes Will Geer (of the Waltons) and Bradford Dillman.

SATURDAY NIGHT MOVIE—Faye Dunaway portrays the unmarried mistress of Kirk Douglas in the film, The Arrangement, based on the semi-autobiographical best-seller by Elia Kazan, to be shown on Saturday at 8:30 p.m. on 8; at 9 p.m. on 5 and 11:15 on Channel 6.

Pop Music Stars Honored In Awards Extravaganza

Superstars of the music world Diana Ross and Elton John will host the "First Annual Rock Music Awards" Special, honoring the best stars and creators of the rock music field and featuring entertainment by top performers, to be broadcast live from the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium on Saturday, Aug. 9 (10:00-11:30 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network.

The awards program, which offers citations in about 15 categories for the most significant creative contributions to the field for the year, will be produced by Kirshner Entertainment Corporation, with Don Kirshner as executive producer.

Winners will be selected by a panel made up of respected music critics and reporters from all over the country who are acknowledged authorities in their field; and of radio hosts chosen by the board of directors of the National Association of Progressive Radio Announcers and voted on by the membership based on their reputation and expertise in the field, and voted on by the membership of the NAPRA.

Singer Diana Ross launched her career performing with the Supremes, multi-Gold Record winning group. Over a period of ten years, the group had 15 consecutive hit singles. Now performing on her own, Miss Ross was nominated for an Academy Award as Best Actress for her portrayal of Billy Holiday in the film Lady Sings the Blues.

English singer-composer Elton John has won seven Gold Albums and seven Platinum Albums for the tremendous response to his music. Four of his single recordings — Crocodile Rock, Goodbye Yellow Brick Road, Bennie and the Jets and Don't Let the Sun Go Down on Me — also have Gold Record recognition for sales totalling in the millions. Noted for the very personal style of his compositions, John is also popular on the concert circuit for his acrobatics while he performs on the piano. In addition to his successful recording career, he is seen as the Pinball Wizard in the film Tommy.

Executive producer Don Kirshner is one of the foremost record and television producers in the rock field. He originated the popular In Concert television series and is producer of "Don Kirshner's Rock Concert" series. Stan Dorfman, noted British television director, will direct the broadcast.

Ann-Margret, Alice Cooper, Roger Daltry, Michael Douglas, LaBelle, Olivia Newton-John, Tony Orlando and Dawn, Brenda Vaccaro, Raquel Welch and Edgar Winter are among top stars representing all facets of show business who will participate, as performers and-or presenters, in The Rock Music Awards.

Final ballots were mailed to more than 1,500 members of the National Association of Progressive Radio Announcers, and to more than 150 rock journalists-critics, selected by the critic members of the blue ribbon nominating panel.

All voting will be tabulated in secret and by computer, and supervised by the certified public accounting firm of Touche, Ross & Co. In a departure from sealed envelopes, the winners of The Rock Music Awards will be fed live from computers centred in Kansas City, and not seen by anyone until the results are revealed on the broadcast.

FIDDLERS MEET FOR PLAYDOWN

An auspicious union that took place in a small central Ontario town celebrates its silver anniversary this August. It's the Canadian Open Championship Fiddle Contest, co-sponsored by the CBC and the Shelburne Rotary Club. Each year CBC Radio has broadcast the Saturday night finals, and to celebrate a quarter century of this happy partnership, the 1975 broadcast will be a 90-minute show, to be aired Sat., Aug. 9 at 11:03 p.m.

It was through the interest of CBC broadcaster Don Fairbairn, long associated with the program Neighborly News, that the CBC first came to broadcast the finals. Since then the contest has drawn entries from all over Canada and the U.S., becoming the biggest event of its kind anywhere, and earning the town of Shelburne (Pop. 3000) the affectionate title, "Fiddleville".

Each year CBC Radio has provided top calibre talent to entertain the hordes of fiddle fans who crowd the community arena, and listeners across Canada. This year, the star billing goes to Cape Breton balladeer John Allan Cameron, that country gentleman Tommy Hunter (who returns to CBC-TV for his 11th season this fall), The Rhythm Pals, that popular trio from the Hunter show, and country singers Lynn Jones and Gloria Kaye. Emcee, for the third year running, is the Metro Morning man on Radio 740 (Toronto), Harry Brown. Banjo player Maurice Bolyer will be along, also Graham Townsend, three-time Grand Champion of the contest.

There are entries from four states, including Sleepy Marlin of Kentucky, who's won more prizes than anyone else. Harry Parker of Owen Sound, who entered the first contest in 1951, has put his name into the 65 and over class. The youngest entry to date is Kathy Reed, aged seven, of Sudbury.

Fred Claridge, former editor of the Shelburne Free Press and Economist, and a member of the contest committee for 25 years, has written a history of the event. He says that by 1976 they hope to have a new and larger home for the contest which each year has to turn more and more people away.

Come the beginning of Fiddle Week, thousands of enthusiasts will pour into the homes and campgrounds of Shelburne, swelling its population fourfold.

European cast dubbed into English.

It (x), on 12 at 11:30. Roddy McDowell stars in this 1967 British-made tale of madness and murder, about an ancient stone statue that comes to life.

Back Street (xx), on 2 at 11:40. This 1961 soap opera is the third version of Fannie Hurst's teary tale of love on the sly, somewhat modernized but still the old plot about a woman sacrificing all for love of a married man, and starring Susan Hayward, John Gavin and Vera Miles.

Paint Your Wagon (xx), on 6 at 11:45. Offbeat casting (Lee Marvin, Jean Seberg, and Clint Eastwood) detracts from this 1969 musical adapted from the Lerner and Loewe Broadway hit about the gold-rush days in the old West.

The Detective (xxx), on 8 at midnight. Frank Sinatra, Lee Remick and Jack Klugman star in this well above-average 1968 crime-drama, about a hard-bitten New York City police detective investigating a messy murder of a young homosexual. The performances are helped by good direction, and a realistic script written by Abby Mann.

Me and the Colonel (xxx), on 7 at 2:20. An entertaining 1958 comedy-drama based on the play about a philosophical Jew forced to join forces with an anti-Semitic Polish colonel during the Second World War, with Danny Kaye and Curt Jurgens in top form.

Brother John, on 6 at 3 a.m. No rating available on this offbeat 1971 drama starring Sidney Poitier as a mystical loner who returns to his Alabama home town at a time of racial tension.

U.S. First Lady Interviewed On Sixty Minutes

Betty Ford, First Lady for just one year, sits for her first extensive television interview in a candid conversation with CBS News Correspondent Morley Safer on 60 Minutes, Sunday, Aug. 10 (9:30-10:30 p.m.) on the CBS Telvision Network.

"This is an unusual interview with a very unusual woman," says Safer. "She is open, honest, and completely frank as she discusses her attitudes about her roles as First Lady, wife, and mother — and as an independent person in her own right."

The interview which also includes Mrs. Ford's comments on her husband's decision to seek the Presidency in 1976 and the state of her health since her cancer surgery, was conducted in the third floor solarium of the White House.

WIMSEY RETURNS TO PBS

Murder Must Advertise, regarded as one of Dorothy L. Sayers' finest detective stories, returns to Masterpiece Theatre as a four part series, beginning August 10 at 8:30 p.m. on KCTS-9.

The aristocratic Wimsey, again portrayed by Ian Carmichael, joins an advertising agency to investigate the death of copy writer Victor Dean, who died under suspicious circumstances. To help his investigation, Wimsey hides his true identity, and masquerades as an aging copywriter named Death (pronounced Deeth) Bredon — his two middle names. In fact, costumes and parties play major roles in Wimsey's search for the truth. In between costume changes, the unflappable lord discovers a flair for writing ad copy, and many clues that point to a drug ring involving England's "bright young things."

As always, Wimsey displays a hardened self, capable of solving the case in the most unusual — though aristocratic —manner.

Murder Must Advertise will be seen in the normal Masterpiece Theatre timeslot, Sundays at 8:30 p.m., with rebroadcasts Fridays at 9:00 p.m.

Today's Highlights

Mike Douglas Show, on 12 at noon and 7 at 6:30. Mike and this week's co-host Peter Falk welcome among their guests, actor-director John Cassavtes, actress Gena Rowlands (Mrs. Cassavetes), Raquel Welch and Broadway actor James Coco. (90 mins.)

RAQUEL WELCH
. . . on 7 at 6:30 p.m.

Book Beat, on 9 at 7. Photo-journalists Eugene and Aileen Smith tell the tragic story of Minamata, a Japanese fishing town poisoned by industrial pollution. Host Bob Cromie talks with the Smiths, who spent three years recording the effects of mercury poisoning, which left many of the villagers crippled or deformed. (30 mins.)

Medical Center, on 8 at 8:30. Tonight's episode features Cyd Charisse in the role of a former movie star whose will to live is undermined by a failing marriage, fading chances of making a film comeback and ill health. The story includes clips from several of Miss Charisse's movies. (60 mins.)

Kathryn Kuhlman, on 11 at 9. Highlights of the June, 1975, appearance of faith healer Kathryn Kuhlman at the Las Vegas Convention Center. An audience of 17,000 attended the five-hour service, which included testimonials from members of the audience, a sermon and reminiscences by Miss Kuhlman. (90 mins.)

V.I.P., on 2 and 6 at 10. Hostess-interviewer Lorraine Thomson talks with British MP, writer and broadcaster Clement Freud, grandson of Sigmund Freud; and Ladislas Farago, author of books on Martin Bormann and Gen. George Patton. (30 mins.)

Hard Times, on 2 and 6 at 10:30. Riding the Rails, second of a four-part retrospective series about the Depression in Canada. Most of the program is devoted to recollection of unemployment and poverty, but on a light note, Miss Toronto of 1937 reminisces about winning a beauty contest. (30 mins.)

Movies

The Day the Fish Came Out (x), on 8 at 12:45. Talented writer-director Michael Cacoyannis (responsible for Zorba the Greek) tried an experiment that didn't work in this offbeat blend of farce, romance and a nuclear crisis, starring Tom Courtenay and Candice Bergen.

Paradise Alley, on 11 at 1. No rating available on this 1962 drama about an idealistic ex-film director who induces the embittered residents of a slum district to appear in an imaginary movie. Cast includes Hugo Haas, Marie Windsor and Chester Conklin.

Palm Springs Weekend (x), on 5 at 3:30. A lightweight 1963 comedy about the romantic problems of students spending their Easter vacation in Palm Springs, starring Connie Stevens and Troy Donahue.

Screamer, on 4 at 11:30. A recently-made-for-television mystery starring Pamela Franklin as a young woman who fears she is being stalked by a rapist.

JACQUELINE BISSET
. . . on 12 at 11:30 p.m.

DON MURRAY
. . . on 8 at 1:15 a.m.

Secret World (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. Jacqueline Bisset stars in this offbeat, but interesting 1968 French-made drama about an emotionally disturbed youngster who becomes infatuated with his uncle's beautiful mistress.

Anything Can Happen (xxx), on 2 at midnight. Excellent performances by Jose Ferrer and Kim Hunter highlight this warm-hearted 1952 comedy-drama about an immigrant adjusting to a new life in the United States.

War Italian Style (xx), on 6 at midnight. The comic genius of Buster Keaton is wasted in this 1965 Italian-made comedy about a bumbling German general who allows two American marines to escape with secret battle plans. This was Keaton's film, and although it doesn't do his talent justice, he does enliven the otherwise dreary proceedings.

Our Men In Bagdad, on 7 at midnight. No rating available on this 1967 Italian-made adventure about spies and espionage in the Middle East, starring Rory Calhoun.

The Mouse on the Moon (xx), on 8 at midnight. Margaret Rutherford and Terry Thomas star in this 1963 sequel to The Mouse That Roared, about the further adventures of the mythical duchy of Grand Fenwick. It's a silly story about Grand Fenwick entering the space race, and not nearly so satirical as the original movie.

The Hoodlum Priest (xxx), on 8 at 1:45. Don Murray gives an excellent performance as Father Charles Dismas, the Jesuit priest who befriended young criminal offenders and tried to help them help themselves. The film centers on one case in particular, that of a young hothead and arrogant ex-con, well-played by Keir Dullea.

The Big Heat (xxx), on 6 at 1:55. A top-notch 1953 police drama starring Glenn Ford as an ex-cop who cracks the underworld hold on a city with the help of a mobster's moll, portrayed by Gloria Grahame. In a supporting role is Lee Marvin as a sadistic killer.

BUSTER KEATON
. . . in 6 at midnight

Ball of Fire (xxx), on 7 at 1:55. A marvelous 1941 comedy about a group of professors who get entangled in the world of burlesque and gangsters during their study of slang in the English language. Directed by Howard Hawks with a great cast that includes Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck and Dana Andrews.

MARY TYLER MOORE

This Baby Has Come a Long Way

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

WASHINGTON (WP) — Mary Tyler Moore has come a long way from the old Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet, when she would pirouette into the middle commercial and announce: "Hi! I'm Happy Hotpoint." She was 16 at the time.

She is now 39, and when the new season opens in September, six CBS-TV prime time programs will have the kitten's meow on the M-T-M sign of the company headed by her. The programs are her own Mary Tyler Moore Show on Saturday; Three for the Road, a one-hour show on Sunday; Doc, which precedes Moore's own show; The Bob Newhart Show, which follows, and the Monday-night pair of Rhoda, followed by Phyllis.

. . . from Dick's TV wife

This means that M-T-M is a major force in filmed television programming. Only the mighty Universal factory, which will have 13 prime-time programs, is ahead of Moore in total production.

Tied for second place with six shows each is the major old movie company called Columbia Pictures Television and M-T-M Productions. Behind them are such companies as Bud Yorkin and Norman Lear's Tandem Productions and Paramount TV (five programs each), M-G-M-TV (whose roaring lion is parodied in the M-T-M seal) and Quinn Martin Productions (three shows each) and 20th Century Fox-TV with two programs.

. . . to MTM Productions

Another measure of her company's importance can be found in the per-episode production budget, as published in a recent issue of Broadcasting magazine. With all six series in production the weekly bill that CBS-TV must pay to M-T-M comes to $801,000. If one multiplies that by ten non-standard 24 episodes a season, the grand total is $19.2 million.

Still another source of revenue for Mary Tyler Moore is the sale of her re-runs recently to NBC-TV's five owned stations. The stations bought seven years of unlimited re-runs of The Mary Tyler Moore Show, to begin when her prime-time run ends on CBS-TV.

That may be a long way into the future, but NBC agreed to pay $52,500 for each episode, and by conservative estimate the series should run for 168 episodes.

The re-runs for her own show just on five NBC stations will bring a total of $3.3 million, and that's only the first round. Situation comedies have long lives and some, such as the original I Love Lucy, are still running 23 years after they were made.

If Mary Tyler Moore is the richest woman in all of television, she deserves it. She was 10 years old when her family moved from Brooklyn to California, and she was a professional dancer — in TV commercials and in chorus lines for variety shows — even before she graduated at 17 from Immaculate Heart high school in Los Angeles. She's one of those dancers who has never stopped running.

After her stint on The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet she turned up as Sam, the telephone answering-service operator on Richard Diamond, Private Eye. Her face was never seen, just her legs, and Moore put up with this foolishness for exactly 13 weeks before quitting. By that time she already had married at 18 and had borne a son, Ritchie, who is now 13.

She made the rounds of the filmed adventure shows, working regularly, until she landed the role of Laura Petrie in the original Dick Van Dyke Show. This series was almost canceled before CBS-TV moved it to a protected time period, where it developed, found an audience and became a television classic.

It ran for six years on CBS-TV (and forever, apparently, in re-runs) and won so many awards that even series creator Carl Reiner lost count. It stands in TV history as the first situation comedy to depend on a man's occupation (comedy writer for a TV series) as its central theme. It stands, also, for the meticulous writing, superb characters and the marvelous interaction that produced steady, loud laughter for 153 episodes.

It had, in short, all the fine qualities that have made the Mary Tyler Moore Show an unqualified TV hit for the past five seasons. Mary Tyler Moore has the single distinction of being in back-to-back TV comedy classics.

Curiously, Dick Van Dyke, a marvelous and droll performer, hasn't been able to repeat his earlier success. His second effort, brilliantly called The New Dick Van Dyke Show — never did become a hit. It limped along while Dick battled alcoholism. He finally won, even if the new series didn't.

Mary Tyler Moore, meantime, had divorced her first husband and married handsome Grant Tinker, who had been a top executive at both NBC-TV and Universal TV. He is her executive producer and one of the major reasons for the continuing success of the M-T-M organization.

She still dances, not as Happy Hotpoint but for the exercise, and to keep her weight at the 118 pounds she has carried for her adult life. She uses the same discipline in everything she does, and for her, the discipline has paid off handsomely.

She and Tinker live in a beach house in Malibu, have occasional differences, make up and watch the money roll in with a regularity that equals the swells of the Pacific Ocean.

Parent owned pre-schools seem to be an exciting concept for many Victoria children, and are of substantial value to their parents. The concept has been around for many years in B.C. and in the Victoria area, which has fourteen separate non-profit schools. Involvement is not simply monetary for parents, who willingly participate actively in the educational process. Each teacher is responsible for a full pre-school course for the youngsters and training for parents who eventually act as "in school" assistants. This form of education will be examined in a new Cable Ten programme series each Monday at 7 p.m.

Honeymoon with a Stranger (xx), on 8 at 12:45. Janet Leigh and Rossano Brazzi star in this contrived 1969 mystery about a bride whose husband disappears on their honeymoon. For those who want to sit through the melodramatics, there is a surprise ending.

Guns of Darkness (xx), on 11 at 1. A 1962 British-made drama about a businessman and his wife who are caught in the turmoil of a South American revolution, and find themselves helping the overthrown president escape to the border. The cast (Navid Niven, Leslie Caron and David Opatoshu) tries hard but the result is no better than fair.

White Feather (xx), on 5 at 2:30. A routine cowboys-and-Indians western, filmed in 1955 with Robert Wagner, Debra Paget and Jeffrey Hunter.

An Elephan Called Slowly (xxx), on 12 at 7. Beautiful on-location photography in Kenya and Tanzania, and some great animal sequences, highlight this 1969 British-made drama-documentary, with Virginia McKenna, Bill Travers and George Adamson returning to the locale of Born Free.

HENRY FONDA
. . . on 8 at midnight

The Great Ice Rip-Off (xxx), on 4 at 8:30. An offbeat 1974 made-for-television crime-drama about a gang of diamond thieves with a most unusual escape route—a cross-country bus that stops and picks up gang members enroute. Foiling the plans of thief Gig Young, is Lee J. Cobb as a retired police officer and fellow bus passenger who is slowly putting two and two together.

Death Among Friends (xx), on 5 at 8:30. Canadian actress Kate Reid is cast as a motherly police detective trying to solve the mysterious murder of a financier in this 1975 made-for-television crime-drama. The supporting cast includes Martin Balsam, Jack Cassidy and Lynda Day George.

The Easy Life (xxxx), on 11 at 9. One of those European-made, mini-masterpieces, this one made in 1963 that tells the story of a naive young law student who falls in with an aging playboy and his decadent friends. The film offers a sharp observation of conflicting personalities, brought to life by the excellent performances of Vittorio Gassman and Jean-Louis Trintignant.

Night Life, on 4 at 11:30. A recently-made-for-television mystery in which a crumbling, once-great restaurant serves as a background for a drama about a jealous husband, his lonely wife and the restaurant owner, who was once the woman's lover. Cast includes Anne Francis, Charles Aidman and Tim Matheson.

Night Must Fall (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. An excellent 1964 British-made film adaptation of the Emlyn Williams play about a cockney bellhop whose charms mask a psychopathic killer, starring Albert Finney, Susan Hampshire and Mona Washbourne.

Casanova '70 (xxx), on 2 at midnight. Marcello Mastroianni stars in this interesting 1965 Italian-made psychological comedy-drama about a sophisticated NATO officer with romantic problems. Some of the ladies in his life include Virna Lisi and Marisa Mell.

Machine Gun McCain (xx), on 6 at midnight. A violent 1968 Italian-made crime-drama about Mafia activities in Las Vegas, starring John Cassavetes, Peter Falk and Gene Rowlands.

Gidget Goes to Rome (x), on 7 at midnight. A lightweight romantic comedy, filmed in 1963 with Cindy Carol and James Darren.

12 Angry Men (xxxx), on 8 at midnight. It's worth staying up for this suspenseful, brilliantly acted 1957 drama about a jury of men who have to decide whether a young boy killed his father with a knife. The entire drama is played in the jury room and each juror shows his true colors. The whole cast is near perfect (Henry Fonda, Lee J. Cobb, Ed Begley, E. G. Marshall, Jack Klugman) but Jack Warden's performance deserves special recognition.

Warkill, on 7 at 1:55 a.m. No rating available on this 1967 drama, set at the end of the Second World War, about a newspaper correspondent who clashes with a sadistic colonel. Cast includes Tom Drake and George Montgomery.

The Doolins of Oklahoma (xx), on 6 at 2 a.m. An old-fashioned (1949) western adventure about the notorious outlaw gang of the Old West, starring Randolph Scott, Louise Allbritton, George Macready and Dona Drake.

Lonelyhearts (xx), on 8 at 2 a.m. An overlong and brooding 1959 drama about an "advice to the lovelorn" columnist who gets too involved with his job — with near tragic results. The cast (Montgomery Clift, Robert Ryan, Myrna Loy) flounders with a badly written script, but Maureen Stapleton is excellent as the wife of a cripple who hungers for a passionate love.

TV Cooking or Beware of Curried Parsnips

By WILLIAM MacVICAR

Possibly the most unforgettable cooking demonstration ever seen on television was by the Kraft hands. Free-floating, unattached, they showed us tasty and economical things to do with Process Cheese and Miracle Whip, to a voice-over by Bruce Marsh. Wonderful.

Cooking shows of one sort or another have been with us since television began. But it was with the gastronomic renaissance of the late nineteen sixties that real talent came to the fore.

On an educational station in Boston, in a jerry-built studio kitchen, Julia Child began showing New Englanders that baked beans could be turned into cassoulet and cod cakes into brandade de morue.

In Canada, a New Zealander named Graham Kerr, who looked like a game-show host, challenged the primacy of the venerable Madame Benoit. Even local programs changed their format; instead of sensible home economists ringing yet one more change on the basic meat loaf, Italians, Chinese and Hungarians began showing Canadians that there were frontiers beyond the boiled turnip to be conquered.

Many of these shows are still continuing, at least in reruns, and new ones come along. They vary from excellent to appalling, and what you choose to watch depends on what you want from the program. If you want a diverting half hour, at the vicarious satisfaction of diet-aroused cravings, or offbeat ideas to work out in your own kitchen in your own way, almost anything will serve. But if you're interested in cooking as a serious craft, and want to start an apprenticeship, the choices are more limited.

The French Chef, Julia Child, is still queen regnant of the video kitchens (and, as co-author of the monumental Mastering the Art of French Cooking, her place in the food establishment is indisputable). The French Chef was designed to be watched as a series, so that simple operations in early shows become steps for more demanding dishes later; yet beginners can always learn from any show.

Julia Child is a joy to watch. A statuesque woman whose kitchen counters had to be built six inches higher than standard, she wheezes and lumbers about the kitchen, losing her eyeglasses, talking in an erratic, flutey voice with daring register changes. Her Boston debut brought in a flood of letters accusing her of drunkenness. But beneath the haphazard manner lies a bedrock of knowledge and experience. Without doubt, she runs a four-star kitchen.

Julia Child's success brought some other ethnic cuisines to the U.S. Public Broadcasting System. The first was Joyce Chen, introducing Chinese cooking. The show, though precise and competent, never caught on. Miss Chen's personality was pleasant but wooden, and there were language difficulties (e.g., "aluminum foyer,"). Also, for most viewers, the leap to Oriental delicacies required not just an extension or modification of their own cooking, but a radically new approach.

More popular is The Romagnolis' Table, a convivial course in Italy's cuisine. The Romagnolis are a genial husband and wife team who collaborate on three-course meals. It's a relaxed, encouraging show, without the edgy chatter of TV personalities, but the familiar banter of a couple comfortably married.

They manage to get across technical data — how to clean and trim squid, for example — without pedantry (no mean feat). Papa Romagnoli sips some wine as he sautes or tosses or pounds, and at the end of the program they sit at the kitchen table to devour their handiwork with gusto. You wish you could sit down with them. Delightful and mouth-watering.

Not all collaborations are so successful. Two "women's shows" — Juliette and Friends and the emphatic Dinah!—occasionally mosey into the kitchen. Once on Dinah Shore's sit-and-chat hour she was hunting for some cream in the refrigerator when out popped Burt Reynolds and gave her a big sloppy kiss. Not good for the appetite. Juliette is more gracious, and guests like Janet Berton will cook Chicken Kiev.

The worst cooking show, hands down is International Cookbook, a Milwaukee production supervised by a home economist, Joan Hood, who behaves like a terrified marionette. She once ventured into soul food, "from recipes of my American Negro friends," and concluded the meal of collard greens garni by pouring her recommended "nice sweet domestic wine" into martini glasses filling them to the brim. To be avoided like curried parsnips.

Another to be shunned, in reruns, is The Galloping Gourmet, Graham Kerr's desecration of good cooking. Kerr battled his way through exotic, often vile, slumgullions (oysters would turn up in the most unlikely places) that most viewers would have the sense not to cook, let alone eat. Some weren't bad, like a chocolate souffle with almonds and grapefruit peel, but the few treasures weren't worth the pain of watching Kerr, who seemed a leftover from vaudeville.

The smutty joke that kicked off each show was usually enough to curb the appetite, but he followed through. Kerr seemed unable to boil an egg without a snigger.

But he has reformed. Take Kerr is a five-minute spot that offers helpful hints in the manner of Heloise. The constraints of time have improved Kerr enormously. With no time for big deals, he concentrates on basic operations — boiling small potatoes, making low-calorie dressings, decanting wine. He's also very calorie- and vitamin-conscious, a long chalk from the clarified-butter addict he once was. Sensible, lucid.

Julia Child—Four-Star Kitchen

Learning to cook on television is far better than book learning. Seeing an intricate, or simply tricky, task performed by skilled hands is truly worth a thousand words, and there are few things on television quite as exhiliarating as watching Julia Child point out the correct cut of lamb by contorting her own body and showing where, if she were a lamb, it would lie. Also, the sound of a fish being properly "seized" by hot butter, the changing viscosity of a thickening hollandaise, are invaluable.

In books, of course, things never go wrong. They do on television, though, and it's reassuring to watch a professional chef have to cope with a mousse that fails to unmold or a flambe that fizzles.

At final reckoning, the proof is in the eating. Unless you try to reproduce an appealing dish, you'll never know if you were watching a working cook or a pots-and-pans illusionist. Did the never-fail souffle sink like a dejected pancake before it even reached the dining room? Did the three-course meal whipped up in half an hour on the show keep you toiling in the kitchen for half a day? Does the lamb-and-oyster bake taste oddly like catfood? If so, change the channel, or, if the problems persist, call up the Colonel.

Movies

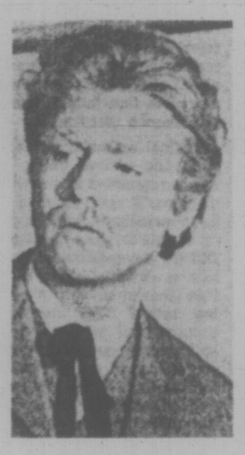
The Secret Life of An American Wife (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A sort of Seven Year Itch in reverse best describes this 1968 comedy about a bored middle-aged housewife who decides to have an affair with a jaded movie star. Two fine comedy actors (Walter Matthau and Anne Jackson) are wasted.

Shadow of Treason (x), on 11 at 1. A low-grade 1964 melodrama, about a soldier of fortune who aids a girl whose life has been threatened, with an unfamiliar cast.

Smiley (xx), on 5 at 3:30 The kids will enjoy this mild little 1957 Australian-made drama, about a boy trying to raise money for a bicycle, who get involved with smugglers. Cast includes Colin Peterson and Ralph Richardson.

Bad Ronald, on 4 at 8:30. No rating available on this 1974 made-for-television drama starring Emmy-winning Scott Jacoby as a youth who is pushed to the brink of sanity after he accidentally kills a bully and, with his mother's help, goes into hiding.

ANTHONY PERKINS
. . . on 2 at midnight



ALAN ARKIN
. . . on 8 at 12:30 p.m.

The Law (xxx), on 8 at 9. An uncompromising 1974 Emmy-winning portrait of American justice — not as it is usually preached, but as it is often practised — complete with deals, plea bargaining and red tape. The basic plot concerns a public defender's efforts to help a young man who is arrested on a drug violation and later charged with murder, but the film's real strength lies in its realism and accuracy.

All the Brothers Were Valiant (xx), on 11 at 9. Robert Taylor, Ann Blyth and Stewart Granger star in this 1953 costume adventure about two strong-willed 19th-century New England whaling captians, who come to grips when one of them decides to go after lost treasure rather than blubber.

Three Bullets for a Long Gun (x), on 12 at 11:30. A Mexican bandit and a mysterious stranger combine their talents in a search for buried treasure in this 1973 low-budget adventure, starring Beau Brummell.

Fear Strikes Out (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. Excellent performances by Anthony Perkins and Karl Malden highlight this absorbing 1957 drama about baseball's Jim Piersall, and the pressures that led to his nervous breakdown.

Investigation of a Citizen Above Suspicion (xxx), on 8 at midnight. An Oscar for best foreign film of 1970 went to this complex satirical satire about politics and Fascist ideology. The plot centres on a smug, mentally unbalanced police chief who plants evidence against himself to test his underlings, his own status and his moral and social superiority. Well-directed by Elio Petri and absorbing throughout.

The War Lover (xx), on 7 at midnight. Steve McQueen, Shirley Anne Field and Robert Wagner star in this 1962 movie adaptation of the John Hersey novel about the personal and professional lives of two U.S. pilots during the Second World War.

Pop! (xxxx), on 8 at 12:30. A brilliant performance by Alan Arkin as the New York Puerto Rican widower who wants a better life for his two sons, highlights this heartwarming 1969 comedy-drama. He will win your affection and sympathy as he comes up with an outrageous plan to set his boys adrift in a boat off the Florida coast in hopes of their finding a better life with some wealthy people after being rescued. The movie has charm and pathos in well-measured amounts and Arkin is truly marvellous.

Strategy of Terror (xx), on 7 at 2 a.m. Barbara Rush and Hugh O'Brien star in this routine 1967 mystery drama about a dying man who helps a journalist uncover a UN assassination plot.

Boots Malone (xx), on 6 at 2:20 a.m. A fast-paced 1952 racetrack story, starring William Holden as a somewhat shady character with a good heart.

The Night of the Hunter (xxxx), on 8 at 2:55 a.m. Robert Mitchum, Shelley Winters and Lillian Gish star in this brooding, but well-made 1955 drama about a fanatic backwood preacher plotting to murder a widow and her two children, in the hopes of finding her dead husband's loot from a robbery. Plenty of suspense, with fine performances by the cast.

Today's Highlights

National Geographic, on 8 at 8. The Last Vikings, a documentary focussing on the modern Norsemen, who carry on the ancient Viking's rugged individualism and love of the sea. Highlighting the program is film footage of one of the Norsemen's last Antarctic whaling expeditions — a 1969 search for blue whales. (60 mins.)

RICHARD KILEY
. . . on 9 at 9 p.m.

Feeling Good, on 9 at 8. Host Dick Cavett looks at the problem of teen-age drug abuse, focussing on one method of treatment which helps young people with drug problems to become involved in projects which give them a sense of achievement. (30 mins.)

Theatre in America, on 9 at 9. Ceremony of Innocence, a play loosely based on the actual reign of England's King Ethelred II (978-1016), dealing with the king's attempts to buy peace from Danish enemies. Not known for his military prowess, Ethelred has come down through history dubbed as "Ethelred the Unready". In 994, he did succeed however, in buying off the Norwegian invaders, and in 1012, the Danish forces. Richard Kiley stars in the role of Ethelred. (90 mins.)

Jim Stafford Show, on 4 at 10. Jim's guests tonight include Loretta Swit (of M-A-S-H) and Ken Berry. (60 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 11:30. Alan Funt is the host of this salute to Candid Camera, featuring excerpts of the series, dating back to 1949. (90 mins.)

Space 1999 Re-Unites Husband-and-Wife Team

By JOSEPH THESKEN

HOLLYWOOD — Barbara Bain was one of the sexiest girls on TV in the days of Mission Impossible. She was the spicy Cinnamon Carter, undercover agent who used her charms and wit to trap the villains. They usually surrendered willingly, for the privilege of spending a little time with her.

Over six years have passed since Barbara and her husband, Martin Landau, bolted that show over a contract dispute. They had some lean years then, picking up work where they found it.

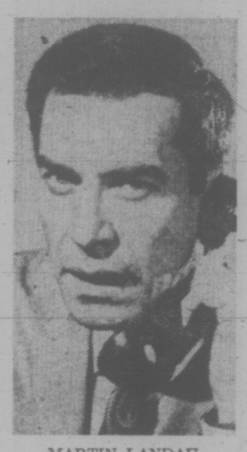
Now Miss Bain, as pretty as ever, has landed a new series called Space 1999.

As the title indicates, she will be airborne — the chief medical officer on Moonbase Alpha, an early-warning defense system on the moon.

The series has served to reunite her with husband Landau in a professional way. He has the top role, playing Cmdr. Koenig, who has the responsibility to command this outpost in space.

They recently returned to this country after 20 months of filming in England. The series is said to be the most expensive science fiction show to be produced for TV. Over $6.5 million was spent by the Independent Television Corp. of England to shoot the 24 episodes at Pinetree Studios outside London.

BARBARA BAIN.



MARTIN LANDAU.

Barbara disclosed some of the plot lines for the episodes you'll be seeing in the fall.

"Just to fill you in on the concept of Space 1999, there is a thermonuclear explosion on the moon which blasts it out of the earth's orbit," she explained. "So we're launched on a series of adventures across the universe.

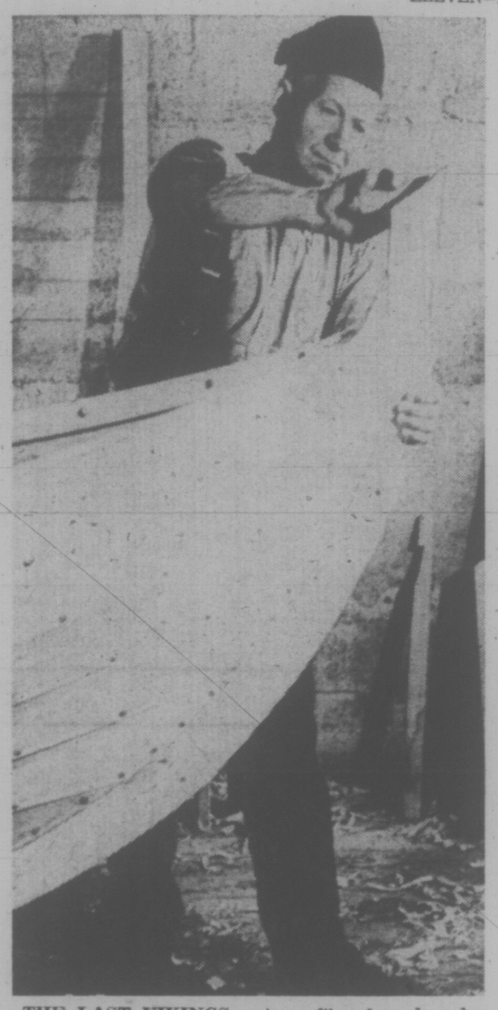
"We need to find a place to locate, but because of the blast we have very little control over the moonbase. We have only limited power.

"In fact, one of our episodes is about that. A crew member, for some mysterious reason, drains energy from people. They become like blocks of ice. Then he begins draining our nuclear energy source. He becomes a threat to our very existence. What are we going to do with him? That's the story line

"In another episode, a baby is born on Alpha. In a five-hour period be becomes 5 years old, because of the rapid growth period while in space.

"Again, this phenomenon of growth is of concern to all the members of the base."

Among the other adventures the space travelers meet are an interplanetary war in which they become innocently involved and finding a planet that is inhabited even though the temperature is a constant 130 degrees below zero.



THE LAW — An acclaimed made-for-television drama-documentary about the inner workings of the U.S. criminal court system, will be telecast on Wednesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 8.

Martin Luther King Story Filmed for NBC Television

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Abby Mann, author of Judgment at Nuremberg and The Marcus-Nelson Murders, will write and produce a drama for NBC television on the life of Martin Luther King.

The three-hour film, to be called King, will be produced next spring and will appear on NBC during the 1976-77 season, says Mann. He added that the film will deal with explosive matters in the black leader's life.

"There's no point in making him out to be a plaster saint," said the writer-producer "And NBC has assured me that I will have freedom to deal with the controversial aspects of his life. Mrs. Coretta King wants it done that way, too.

"The film will deal with his real relationships with the Kennedys and with Lyndon Johnson, his stand on Vietnam and the loss of power that resulted from it. Such black leaders as Ralph Bunché and Senator Edward Brooke urged him not to take a stand on the war. When he did there was widespread resentment of a black man's trying to deal with international politics.

I was with King one day in a small hotel on the wrong side of Miami. He was eating a steak and he pushed it away and said, 'Nothing is good until I come out against Vietnam'."

Mann said he had tried to launch a film biography after King's assassination, but was unable to find financing — "it's ironic that there were three picture projects on Malcolm X and none on Martin Luther King."

At one time MGM wanted to do a King film for TV but Mann was not available, and Mrs. King had wanted him to write it. NBC became interested and now Mann will produce King with his own company.

Why film the biography for television, not theatres?

"Frankly, I'm not sure I could get the financing for a feature film. Also, something happens on television that is very vital. Overnight a show becomes part of our culture."

CAVETT HOSTS MINI-SERIES

Dick Cavett combines his talents as a conversationalist and performer in a four-week mini-series, premiering Tuesday, August 12, 7:00-8:00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network (and Saturday at 10 p.m. on CBS).

This musical-variety show will include music, visits from well-known personalities, and Dick Cavett's refreshing wit and style. Guests appearing on the opening program are the incomparable Liza Minnelli and the star of the Broadway success The Magic Show, magician Doug Henning.

Cavett began his show-business career writing monologues for Jack Parr. Later he expanded to write for many of TV's top stars including Johnny Carson, Jerry Lewis and Groucho Marx.

In March, 1968, he began hosting the critically-acclaimed talk program The Dick Cavett Show, winning an Emmy, and a fan cult, for his excellence.

Today's Highlights

ABC Afternoon Playbreak on 4 at 1:30. Oh! Baby, Baby, Baby, a made-for-television comedy about a struggling intern and his expectant wife preparing for the staggering possibility that they may become the parents of quints. Cast includes Judy Carne and Bert Convy. (90 mins.)

MUHAMMAD ALI
. . . on 4 at 11:30 p.m.

Mike Douglas Show, on 7 at 6:30, and 12 at noon. Mike and this week's co-host Peter Falk welcome among today's guests actors Ryan O'Neal and Richard Dreyfuss, pop music star Alice Cooper, singer Vic Damone and boxer Joe Frazier. (90 mins.)

A Third Testament, on 2 and 6 at 8. Host Malcolm Muggeridge's third in a series of profiles of great men who were influenced by religion, focuses on the English poet and artist William Blake (1757-1827). (60 mins.)

Best of Evening at Pops, on 9 at 8:30. Joining Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra is pianist Roger Williams, who performs a medley of classical and popular selections. (60 mins.)

Hollywood Television Theatre, on 9 at 9. Requiem for a Nun, an intense drama by William Faulkner, and starring Sarah Miles. The play, which comes with a warning to viewers that some of the language and racial slurs may be offensive to viewers, roots up the events and the motives that led to the murder of an infant child by a black servant. The infant was the child of the central character, a high-born, but morally weak and neurotic southern woman, well-played by Miss Miles. (90 mins.)

Spotlight, on 2 at 10:30. Vancouver journalist and program host Doug Collins interviews the leader of the Parti Quebecois, Rene Levesque. (30 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 11:30. Another edition of Good-Night America, hosted by Geraldo Rivera, whose special guest tonight is Muhammad Ali. Also on the program is Washington Post reporter Sally Quinn, who recalls her unsuccessful career as a TV news commentator. (90 mins.)

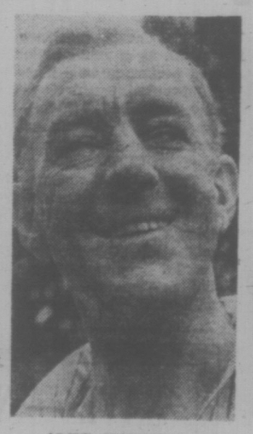
Movies

Tunes of Glory (xxxx), on 8 at 12:45. A sad but superb 1960 English-made drama focusing on the bitter struggle between a vicious, careless, goldbricking colonel and the intelligent, disciplined, civilized young officer who supersedes him in command. Recommended particularly for the magnificent and memorable performances by Alec Guinness and John Mills.

The Strange Mr. Gregory on 11 at 1. No rating available on this 1945 drama starring Edmund Lowe as a magician who fakes his own murder in order to frame his rival in love.

An Ideal Husband, on 5 at 3:30. Paulette Goddard, Michael Wilding and Glynis Johns star in this 1947 English-made movie adaptation of the Oscar Wilde comedy about an adventuress who tries to blackmail a government official.

Rachel, Rachel (xxxx), on 5 at 9. Canadian writer Margaret Lawrence's A Jest of God has been turned into this critically acclaimed 1968 movie, starring Joanne Woodward in the title role. Flawlessly, under the sure and sensitive hand of her husband Paul Newman (who directed this film), Miss Woodward etches the loneliness and frustration of Rachel Cameron, a spinster schoolteacher, who at 35, begins seeking away out of her loveless life in a small Connecticut town. Recommended.



ALEC GUINNESS
. . . on 8 at 12:45 p.m.

JOANNE WOODWARD
. . . on 5 at 9 p.m.

Who's Minding the Mint? (xxx), on 7 at 9. A great supporting cast of veteran comedy actors (Milton Berle, Joey Bishop, Jack Gilford, Jamie Farr) enhances this zany 1967 comedy about a mint worker's innocent plan to print and replace the $50,000 he accidentally destroyed, backfires into a madcap heist. Jim Hutton and Dorothy Provine star.

The Passionate Thief (xx), on 11 at 9. An uneven 1962 Italian-made comedy about a small time actor who inadvertently keeps thwarting the attempts of a pickpocket on New Year's Eve, starring Ben Gazzara and Anna Magnani.

A Breath of Scandal (xx), on 12 at 9:30. Sophia Loren and Maurice Chevalier are the only assets of this otherwise stale 1959 comedy about a young American (John Gavin) in Vienna who rescues a princess, falls in love with her, and then finds himself hampered by court protocol.

Count Yorga, Vampire, on 12 at 11:30. No rating available on this 1970 thriller mixing Gothic horror with contemporary Los Angeles settings. The cast is unfamiliar.

High Treason (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. A thrilling 1952 British-made spy drama about Scotland Yard investigating the mysterious explosion of a munitions ship. Directed by Ray Boulting, with Liam Redmond heading a fine cast.

The Hellions, on 6 at midnight. No rating available on this 1961 British-made adventure about an outlaw family terrorizing a South African town, starring Lionel Jeffries and Anne Aubrey.

Woman's World (xxx), on 7 at midnight. Clifton Webb, June Allyson, Van Heflin, Fred MacMurray, Lauren Bacall, Arlene Dahl and Cornel Wilde star in this glossy but interesting 1954 drama about behind-the-scenes competition for a top industrial job. This sophisticated glimpse into the leather-lined world of big business may not be an accurate one, but it makes for entertaining late-night viewing.

Hornet's Nest (xx), on 8 at midnight. Standard heroics highlight this 1970 Second World War drama about a paratrooper out to destroy a vital dam behind Nazi lines. Rock Hudson stars.

Secret Agent 101 (x), on 6 at 1:50 a.m. A 1968 Japanese made espionage adventure, dubbed into English.

The Mudlark (xxx), on 7 at 1:50 a.m. A charming 1951 story about a young orphan who manages to smuggle himself into Windsor Castle to meet Queen Victoria. Irene Dunne as the Queen and Andrew Ray as the child are excellent, but it's Alec Guinness in the role of Disraeli who shines.

Pork Chop Hill (xxx), on 8 at 2:20 a.m. Gregory Peck heads a fine cast in this stark and hard-hitting 1959 drama about the last hours of the Korean War, focusing on a courageous U.S. infantry unit. One of the better war dramas, directed by veteran Lewis Milestone.

World Collapse By Year 2040?

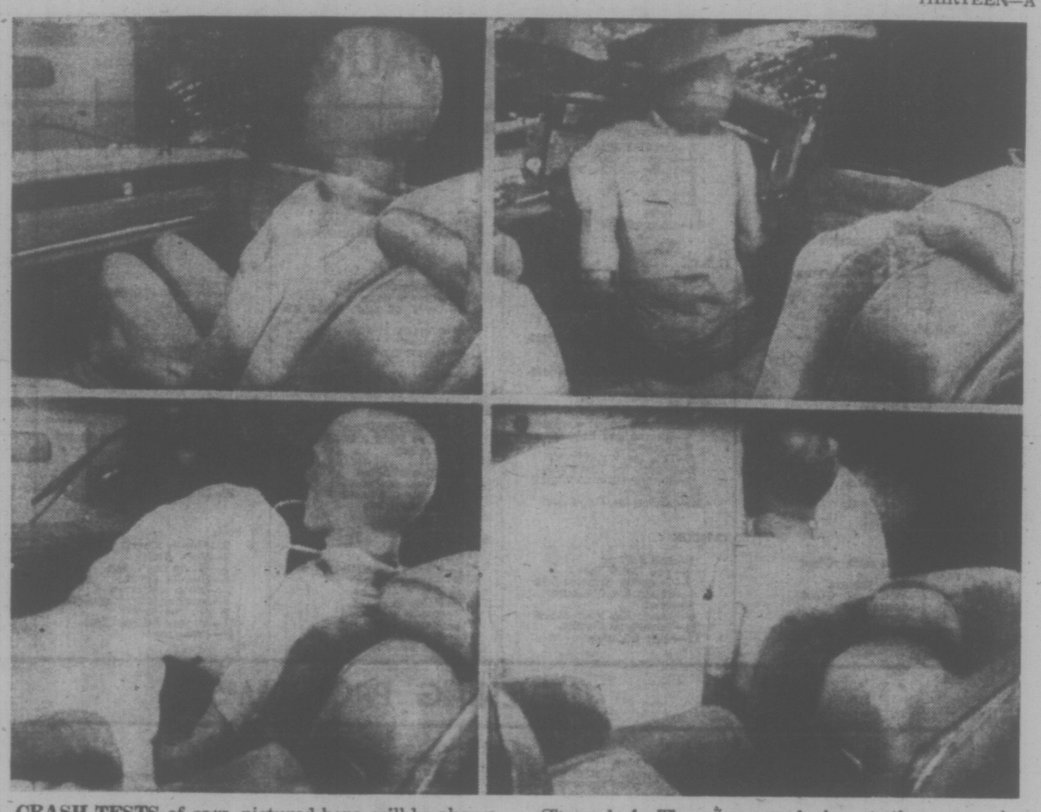
M.I.T. researcher Dennis Meadows claims, with the help of computer modeling, that by the year 2040 the world economy is headed for collapse bringing on pestilence, poverty and starvation unless uncontrolled economic growth is stopped. This is the subject for the next episode of Towards Tomorrow, titled Earth, No Vacancy: Limits to Growth, airing Thursday, August 14, 9:30-10:00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

The Meadows study focused on five major variables: the world's total non-renewable supply of resources, population levels, the growing amount of pollution, the rate of industrial output per capita anl the amount of food production per capita.

Some say there is every reason for concern. Back in 1650, world population was half a billion. The doubling time was 250 years. It took only 80 years for the next doubling. We hit 2 billion by 1930 and in 1970 the figure rose to 3.6 billion. There is no way we can stop another doubling by the year 2000.

If population growth goes on at its present rate for another 900 years, there would be 60 million billion people on earth. That is 100 people for every square yard. They'd have to be housed in a 2,000 storey building covering the entire planet and the heat given off would keep the temperature of the world roof close to the melting point of iron.

Not many take Meadows' predictions seriously, but the movement has started to keep control of the factors that could lead to our own demise. Even the ones who don't believe in the problem being this huge still hope we can settle the problem before we run out of everything.



CRASH TESTS of cars, pictured here, will be shown as part of the Channel 4 news special, Autos: Spoiled by Success?, to be telecast on Friday at 10 p.m. on Channel 4. The program looks at the economic power of the auto industry and examines the safety and energy consumption of its cars.

PBS Encores Faulkner Drama

Hollywood Television Theatre presents Nobel Prize winner William Faulkner's only play, "Requiem for a Nun," August 14 at 9:00 p.m. on KCTS-9.

The play, set in a small 1930's Mississippi town, focuses on Temple Drake (Sarah Miles), whose infant daughter has been murdered by her black nurse (Mary Alice).

Nancy, a former drunk and drug-addict, was thought to have reformed when hired as a nurse. Through all her sordid past experiences, she has remained deeply religious. Convinced that she was saving the infant from sin, she killed her. She confesses, and is sentenced to death.

During the play, Temple's complicity in the murder, and the degenerate repressive, guilt-ridden household are exposed.

SARAH MILES stars in William Faulkner's Requiem for a Nun, to be shown on Thursday at 9 p.m. on Channel 9.

EPITAPH FOR A PEACOCK

By TOM SHALES

WASHINGTON (WP) — Nobody ever thought of a name for the NBC peacock — at least, not one that stuck. "We just call it 'The Bird,' " says an NBC employee.

By Christmas, The Bird will probably be extinct. In its corporate wisdom, NBC has decided to phase out the peacock and send it off to that commercial menagerie in the great beyond where Elsie the Borden Cow, Dino the Sinclair Dinosaur and Little Nipper, the dog who listened for "His Master's Voice" from the gramophone, still presumably romp and play, but sell nothing.

The NBC peacock would have been 20 years old next year. In its heyday, The Bird heralded every color show on the network. Then, by late 1966, every show on the network was in color, and the peacock was spreading its animated feathers more than 100 times a week while an announcer said, "The following program is brought to you in living color on NBC" and some rippling music played.

But recently, the phasing out was apparent. Last week, Johnny Carson noticed that the peacock was missing from the beginning of his show. he seemed to get a little misty-eyed. By this time, the peacock had been reduced to appearances before the Today Show, at the start of the afternoon schedule and prior to certain sports events and specials.

NBC vice president Gerald Rowe was grilled recently on the apparent demise of this friendly old icon.

"I don't want to be vague," said Rowe, under intense questioning. "The truth is we are in the middle of a whole design reorganization. We'll have a new company logo, everything. The new format will go into effect in about six months, and I'm afraid no provision has been made for the poor old bird.

"I would think the damn thing would eventually disappear," Rowe said.

"Like so many things, the peacock outlived its essential purpose, which was, bluntly, to sell color TV sets for RCA, the company that happens to own NBC, and which pioneered color. Now that most families who own a television set own a color television set, there is no need for a repeated 12-second reminder to go out and buy one.

Rowe said he did not know if the peacock was indeed conceived to sell color sets for RCA, but said, "That was undoubtedly its effect. It kept making the point that, 'Holy Smoke! There are programs in color!

Corporations have gone in a lot lately for streamlining their images. In the past decade the rage has been to shorten lengthy, mellow old company names into the quick and the catchy. Cities service became Citgo, Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing became the 3M Company (see how catchy it is?) And the Radio Corporation of American, in 1968, became just plain, easy-to-remember, RCA.

It was at that point that RCA gave the boot to that nice old dog Little Nipper, who had kept his gramaphone vigil for years on appliances and record labels. People who liked the pooch objected. "We got letters and things," an RCA spokesman recalled. "They always hate to see something like that go. But the company was changing its whole image."

John T. Graham, who designed the original peacock (after color symbols like a butterfly, a rainbow and an American flag here tried and discarded), is redesigning NBC's image right this very moment. This means a definite farewell also to the NBC trademark with the N and the B on the cop top of the C. Nobody could possibly get sentimental about that. But the peacock — will there be public protest?

"I tend to doubt that people are concerned with the internal doing of corporations as they try to improve their image," said Rome. "I don't thing anyone's heart will be broken."

Besides, the peacock had become something of a joke around the network, and not just to knee-jerk jokesters like Johnny Carson, either. But Rowe recalled that, years ago, when Jerry Lewis wanted to open one of his NBC shows with a spoof on the bird (probably Lewis in feathers), the network said no — just the way MGM had said no decades earlier when the Marx Brothers wanted to open one of their pictures with Harpo growling — silently of course — instead of Leo the Lion.

Why would the network care about a little joke like that? "Typical corporate nonsense," said Rowe.

Movies

The Night They Raided Minsky's (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. Forget the silly story line in this 1968 comedy, and just sit back and enjoy the many nostalgic scenes which capture the attractive, sleazy quality of old-time burlesque, and the comedians whose "racy" material filled out the stage waits between the strippers. Cast includes Jason Robards Jr., Bert Lahr, Britt Ekland and Norman Wisdom.

The Mysterious Doctor, on 11 at 1. No rating available on this 1943 thriller about a headless ghost which is said to inhabit the pit of an abandoned mine. Cast includes Eleanor Parker and Bruce Lester.

Operation Secret (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. A well-produced 1952 espionage thriller about the dangerous activities of the French underground during the Second World War, starring Cornel Wilde, Phyllis Thaxter, Karl Malden and Steve Cochran.

Born Free (xxxx), on 4 at 8. Repeat of a family favorite, this 1966 movie is based on Joy Adamson's best-seller about an orphaned lion cub named Elsa, who was reared by the author and her game warden husband George. Filmed in 1966, the couple are portrayed by Virginia McKenna and Bill Travers, and the movie was shot on location in Africa.

The Games, on 7 at 8 No rating available on this 1970 English-made drama which uses the setting of the 1960 Rome Olympiad to tell the story of four contenders in the 26-mile marathon. Cast includes Ryan O'Neal, Michael Crawford, Stanley Baker and Charles Aznavour.

The Big Rip-Off, on 8 at 8:30. No rating available on this 1975 pilot for an upcoming series entitled, McCoy, starring Tony Curtis as a sophisticated but unlucky gambler who uses a sleuth's deductive powers and a con artist's guile to make enough money to pay off his mobster creditors.

The Underground Man (xx), on 5 at 9. Peter Graves, Jack Klugman, Judith Anderson and Celeste Holm star in this 1974 made-for-TV crime-drama, about a private detective searching for a former girlfriend's kidnapped son. This movie is based on the best-selling mystery novel by Ross Macdonald, and served as the pilot for the short-lived series, Archer.

ROBERT REDFORD
. . . on 12 at 9 p.m.

Barefoot in the Park (xxx), on 12 at 9. An entertaining 1967 film rendering of Neil Simon's hit Broadway comedy, about a pair of newlyweds setting up Manhattan housekeeping with more ideas than money and an interfering mother-in-law. Bright performances are turned in by Robert Redford, Jane Fonda and Mildren Natwick.

The Blue Knight (xxx), on 7 at 9:30. George Kennedy picks up where William Holden left off as the veteran cop on the beat in this 1975 sequel to last season's mini-series of the same name. The plot centers on his search for the killer of an aging colleague, and the supporting cast includes Alex Rocco and Verna Bloom.

Once a Thief (xxx), on 12 at 11:15. An interesting 1965 crime-drama which benefits from Alain Delon's restrained performance as an ex-con who tries to go straight but has little luck. Ann-Margret is mis-cast as Delon's wife, but Jack Palance and Van Heflin are fine in supporting roles.

Duel at Diablo (xxx), on 2 at midnight. James Garner, Sidney Poitier and Bibi Andersson star in this violent, but well produced 1966 western drama about a scout seeking to avenge his Indian wife's murder. The film also benefits from a fine musical score by jazz composer Neal Hefti.

Marooned (xxx), on 6 at midnight. A good cast (Gregory Peck, Richard Crenna, Gene Hackman, Lee Grant, James Franciscus and David Janssen) and Oscar-winning special effects enhance this 1969 drama about mission control working against time and a threatening hurricane to rescue three astronauts trapped in space.

Strait-Jacket (xx), on 7 at midnight. A contrived 1964 shocker starring Joan Crawford as a woman released from a mental hospital after having committed a series of axe murders. She goes to live with her daughter and, as expected, axe murders begin to occur agian.

Surperargo and the Faceless Giants (x), on 8 at midnight. A silly 1968 European-made adventure yarn about kidnapped athletes who are turned into electronic monsters.
